TEETH MARKS ON SLAIN COP MAY CONVICT

When Patrolman William Welch of Framingham was shot to death in a furious encounter in the old Roxbury House at Saxonville on the bitter cold night of Feb. 3 last his assailant bit him in the wrist.

Today those teeth marks may convict a man for murder.

District Attorney Arthur K. Reading in East Cambridge court today admitted a finger at little Salvatore Litteri, accused of the murder and shouted:

"They're the marks of your teeth Litteri. They'll send you to the chair."

The courtroom sat electrified. The little Italian cowed. Webbed about Litteri also is a mass of circumstantial evidence connecting him with the slaying. It is contended that Patrolman Welch caught Litteri burglarizing Summer cottages, arrested him and was taking him into the hotel to telephone when shot death.

Footprints in the snow, "like the etprints in the sand in Robinson Crusoe," said the district-attorney, also heard you, Litteri, as the slayer."

NINE MEN PERISH IN SHIPWRECKS

Northern Maine and Nova Scotia Swept by Storm; Apple Crop Ruined

A 24-hour hurricane along the Nova Scotia and the Maine coasts is believed to have taken a toll of nine lives and left many survivors of shipwrecks at sea in open boats, and probably on the verge of perishing.

Several ships have been wrecked, while in the town of Sydney, in the Maritime Provinces, fifty houses were flooded and families marooned.

Schooner Allen F. Rose, of Noss foundland, was blown from her anchorage onto the rocks, battered to pieces and her crew of seven men drowned. The lumer laden schooner George Parr, of the Barbadoes, was abandoned after her captain and a member of the crew had been washed overboard and drowned.

RESCUED IN LIFEBOAT.

Six survivors at sea in an open boat were rescued by the crew of the steamship Schodak, New York bound.

The hurricane raging on the Atlantic has delayed several steamships due in Boston, including the Anchor Line steamer Cameronia from Glasgow and Moville and the North German Lloyd Line steamer Yorck, from Bremen. Both have immigrants hastening to get into the October quota.

The Cameronia, with 741 cabin and 405 third-class passengers, principally Scotch and Irish immigrants, was expected yesterday, but sent word by wireless that she was battling fierce storms and would not arrive until tomorrow.

BIG LINERS DELAYED.

She will dock at Cunard pier, East Boston. The Cameronia is making a terminal sailing to this port and will return direct to Glasgow next Tuesday, without having touched at New York either way.

The Yorck, on her first voyage to Boston, evidently met the gale yesterday, for her commander sent word that she would not reach port until tomorrow. The liner will dock at Commonwealth Pier, South Boston, at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Yorck has 314 cabin and 508 third class passengers, and was sent here this voyage owing to the crowded conditions at Ellis Island. After landing the third class travelers the steamer will continue to New York where the cabin passengers will land.

NEW ARREST IN BANK THEFTS

South Boston Man 4th Clerk Seized in Crusade; More Arrests Coming

Another bank clerk was arrested today.

Jesse F. Baker of South Boston, twenty-seven years old and married, was before Judge Lowell in Federal Court on charges growing out of alleged defalcations which occurred in 1921.

At that time he was check teller for the Citizens' National Bank.

His arrest marks the fourth in two days and others are to follow.

A Federal Grand Jury last week returned almost a dozen secret indictments for defalcations from various Boston banks.

MORE ARRESTS COMING.

An extensive investigation by Department of Justice operatives brought the thefts to light.

Baker formerly was employed by the Waltham Trust Company at Waltham and by the Hanover Trust Company of Boston. He was discharged from the Citizens' National October 1, 1921, but is understood now to be employed by a Boston bank.

He is accused of falsifying bond coupons sent out for collection and of making false entries in his ledger.

FIND $346 SHORTAGE.

Mistakes in his books amounting to $346.17 were discovered. The first, found January 5, 1921, he explained by saying that others had access to a box containing the coupons.

He was demoted to an assistant teller's position at $1800 a year. His salary had been $1700.

August 1, 1921, it was discovered that he was short $200. He was discharged.

Judge Lowell held Baker in $500 bail and allowed him to go free on his own recognizance.

COURT ENJOINS VOTE IN KLAN ELECTION

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 2 (A.P.)—A temporary restraining order preventing the State election board from certifying the returns from yesterday's special election was issued in State District Court here today upon application of counsel for Governor J. C. Walton.

The order was granted immediately after the Executive's petition was filed before Judge Tom G. Chambers, Jr. It enjoins W. C. McAlister, secretary, John P. Logan, deposed chairman; Ira Mitchell, newly appointed chairman, and Claude Baker, member, from certifying the returns of "the pretended election," to the Secretary of State.

RULING BARS BRANCH BANKS FROM ALL BUT CASH DEALS

Washington, Oct. 3.—National banks are forbidden by law from engaging in branch banking business, even within the cities in which they are located, Attorney-General Daugherty holds in an opinion explained today to the joint Congressional Banking Commission by Comptroller of the Currency Dawes.

Such banks may, however, extend facilities for receiving deposits and cashing checks within the limits of the city, Comptroller Dawes conferred to these facilities as "tellers windows," and intimated that no other functions, such as making loans or purchasing securities, should be carried on at these windows.

CONVICTS KILL TWO GUARDS; BARRICADE SELVES IN PRISON

Madisonville, Ky., Oct. 3—Four convicts at the State Penitentiary at Eddyville, about thirty miles southwest of here, shot and killed two guards, seriously wounded two other guards, and an employee of the penitentiary kitchen, and barricaded themselves in the kitchen, where a considerable time after the outbreak they were shooting at everybody within sight.

Meanwhile the wounded men lying between the penitentiary and the kitchen, were crying for help while the guards were powerless to render such aid.

ZR-1 BACK IN JERSEY AFTER REMARKABLE TRIP

Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 3—Completing a record trip to St. Louis and return, the navy dirigible ZR-1 nosed her way out of a bank of clouds within sight of her home hangar at the naval aviation field here at 6:08 o'clock today.

Within thirty minutes, the big ship, which apparently had been traveling at less than ten miles an hour when sighted, gracefully circuled the field and began a slow descent, her resplendent silver sides tinged with the gold of the sun of dawn.

A great crowd had gathered to view the triumphal return.

If weather condits permit, the ZR-1 will fly over Boston on Friday en route from Washington to the Brockton fair.

Thousands at the fair will have the opportunity to see this dirigible in the air, a series of exhibition flights being planned.

Lieutenant R. E. Byrd, in charge of aviation at the Boston Navy Yard, said today:

"I expect to see the ZR-1 above Boston no later than Friday."

HUB WOMAN'S SISTER WEDS CHINESE

They were married in St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Albany, N. Y. on Tuesday. A reception followed at the Ten Eyck Hotel. The couple will pass the Winter in New Haven, then go to China to live.

DEAD WIFE'S CHUM TELLS HER STORY

Mrs. Johnstone Describes last Three Weeks in Sick room of Heiress

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 3—Mrs. Margaret J. Johnstone, wife of a former New York judge, and an intimate friend of the late Mrs. Charles Webb, went before the Grand Jury today to tell what she knew about the society woman's death.

Mrs. Johnstone, who has been quoted as expressing belief that her friend had been poisoned, kept a diary in which she recorded each day preceding Mrs. Webb's death. She was expected to refer to this before the grand jury.

Mrs. Johnstone was accompanied to the courthouse by her husband and Stanley Richter, a law student of former Judge Johnstone, but was remained outside the jury room.

"I told District Attorney Rowe yesterday that Mrs. Johnstone would voluntarily appear before him any time," Jam Over.

KILLS BARBER WHEN SHAVE IS REFUSED

New York, Oct. 3.—Refusal to shave an impatient customer cost the life of James Formita, uptown barber, today, and resulted in the arrest of Julius Rodericquez Z, who said he was a Porto Rican cowboy, on a charge of homicide. Rodericquez entered Formita's shop and put himself in a chair. When recommended to a neighboring shop, he commenced to shoot up the place. One bullet killed Formita, another grazed the cheek of an assistant.

time and tell whatever she knew," said Mr. Johnstone.

"She was prepared to make a statement to him before going before the grand jury, but he said he did not want her statefent yesterday. Our only interest in the matter is to uphold truth and justice."

The case also was to be brought to the attention of Governor Alfred A. Smith today.

Friends of the dead woman will ask that the Governor order the Attorney-General to make a thorough investigation into circumstances surrounding the bride's passing which prompted her physician to refuse to sign a burial permit.

MAY DROP CASE

This move follows the hinted desire of Westchester County officials to drop the investigation. They frown on the theory that Mrs. Webb met death through the injection of a subtle poison into her system.

Mrs. Webb died at the fashionable Westchester Biltmore Country Club at Rye. Two last-minute wills helped to augment the mystery of her demise. One left the bulk of her estate to her husband, Charles Webb.

An admission that evidence of poison has been found in the viscera of Mrs. Webb by Dr. Alexander O. Goettler, toxicologist, was made today by Coroner Fitzgerald.

The Westchester County Grand Jury is probing the death. Before them today will appear Mrs. Margaret P. ("Peggy") Johnstone, wife of a former New York jurist and lifelong chum of the dead woman.

Other witnesses to be questioned are Mrs. Mary Burdick, wife of Mrs. Webb's attorney, and Judge and Mrs. John P. McIntyre. Mrs. McIntyre and Mrs. Burdick were present when Mrs. Webb died and had seen her frequently during her illness. Judge McIntyre was a lifelong friend of Mrs. Webb and entertained for her a paternal fondness.

William T. Hunter of Devon, Pa., uncle of Mrs. Webb, also is expected to be a witness.

Mrs. Webb is said to have told Judge McIntyre she had no recollection of signing a will during her illness.

GAVE HER TABLETS

Dr. Meyer and Mrs. Johnstone say Mrs. Webb informed them, shortly before her death, that her husband administered to her certain tablets, the nature of which she did not know. She described the tablets as being round and contained in a glass bottle. She said she had not known where they were obtained.

During Mrs. Webb's illness, Mrs. Johnstone said, Webb telephoned her and told her that "if Gertie should die and anything come of it, I want you to know that she has been using a disinfectant called Paxtine."

Paxtine, according to druggists, is a non-poisonous disinfectant.

Dr. Meyer and Mrs. Johnstone said Mrs. Webb told them her husband had informed her he had been warned by either Dr. Ernest P. Krug or Dr. Davenport West that she could not live thirty days.

When asked if the report that he told Mrs. Webb that she had only a month to live were true, Dr. Krug, who is an eye specialist, said:

"Do I look like a charlatan who would tell anybody he had only thirty days to live?"

QUITE ILL

Dr. Krug said Mrs. Webb came to his office during the latter part of August accompanied by her husband, whom Dr. Krug had previously met, although the physician had not known Mrs. Webb.

Dr. Krug said he considered Mrs. Webb quite ill and suggested that she consult a general practitioner and recommended Dr. Davenport. Further than that Dr. Krug refused to discuss the case until called upon to do so by the authorities.

It was learned today that Webb had frequently been ordered from his wife's sickroom by the nurses in attendance during her illness at the Westchester-Biltmore. These nurses, Misses Margaret Dayton and Anna Heraug, have been questioned by District Attorney Rowland.

It is no secret, that Westchester officials are only half-hearted in their probe of what Mrs. Webb's friend's term "her murder." The county just expended a fortune on the Ward trial. Another case of such importance and expense is distinctly not wanted.

The move to seek aid from Governor Smith was made after Coroner Fitzgerald and District Attorney Rowland made statements that if more evidences of poisoning were not forthcoming immediately the case would be dropped. The chemical analysis of Mrs. Webb's kidneys, has not as yet been reported officially to the county officials.

Charles Webb, husband of the dead bride, gave out a statement for the first time today since the case was brought to the attention of the public.

"My statement," said Webb, "is at the request of many friends who have advised me to speak up and throttle the insinuations by persons who are peculiarly hostile to me."

EYES AFFECTED

Webb said his wife, on August 21, had consulted Dr. Ernest P. Krug, who after examining her eyes, advised her to consult a general practitioner.

Thereupon she consulted Dr. Davenport West, her husband said, who reported her kidneys diseased, and sent her to Roosevelt Hospital. After a week there she went by motor to the Westchester-Biltmore Club at Rye. There she became seriously ill and was attended by Dr. William J. Meyer.

Webb said that during her illness, Mrs. Webb had ordered a new will drawn, which left bequests to relatives and not all to her husband. According to Webb, his wife was too ill to sign this instrument, but he intended to carry out, so far as possible, its provisions.

NATURAL DEATH

"It is my belief," Webb said, "that Mrs. Webb died from purely natural causes, but if there is any mystery connected with her death, I sincerely hope it will be solved by the chemical examination I understand is about to be concluded.

"If a crime has been committed, I will devote myself to the uttermost to discover and punish the criminal."

He charged that Dr. William J. Meyer, who attended Mrs. Webb from Sept. 8 until her death, excluded him from the sick room and also objected to consulting with any other physician.

The doctor admitted the charge frankly. He said Mr. Webb had continued to transact business with his wife during her critical illness, but added that this was not the reason for excluding him.

"It was for a very different reason, which I shall not reveal now," he said, "but which the authorities may have if they desire it."

It was only on the insistence of Colonel Kingsbury, Webb said, that Dr. Meyer consented to have another physician called.

FIGHT FOR ESTATE

Webb indicated he plans to wage a bitter legal fight to get possession of his wife's estate, under the terms of the will in which he is made sole heir. He said he would carry out the provisions, so far as he can, of the unexecuted will, drawn up on Aug. 21, in which Mrs. Webb's relatives and friends are named beneficiaries as well as himself.

That was the will that was unsigned and undated because, he added, Dr. Meyer refused to permit Mrs. Webb to be disturbed with business matters.

Webb's statement was issued after Irving E. Burdick, for years attorney for the Gorman family, filed objections to probate of the will which would give the husband full control of the estate.

WILL PROTESTED

S. Jennings Gorman, Sr., father of Mrs. Webb, appeared as the sole contestant. Burdick said he did not intend to file the will executed by Mrs. Webb in February, 1921, before her marriage, in which relatives and friends are named beneficiaries and Webb, of course, is not mentioned.

In the objections it is charged that:

1—The will offered for probate by Webb was never executed as required and is null and void.

2—At the time, the decedent did not have testamentary capacity.

3—Execution of the document was not the free and unrestrained act of Gertie Emily Gorman Webb, but that one or more persons exercised such improper and undue influence in he obtaining of the execution fit ever executed so as to make it wholly illegal and void. Further, the contestant, as an heir at law and next of kin alleges that:

DIED INTESTATE

4—The testatrix died intestate as to the property attempted to b edisposed of in the will and that he, the father, is entitled to receive and possess his legal share of such property under the statute.

The objecting petition concludes with a demand that a trial by jury be held to determine the issues raised, and that the will be rejected and probate refused.

Other relatives will attempt to show that a second document, which Mrs. Webb left unsigned because of her illness, in reality expressed her wishes.

Former Surrogate Daniel F. Cohalan has been retained by relatives to contest the short will which was filed for probate. The clerk in the surrogate's office had refused to accept the unsigned will even as a memorandum.

Coroner Fitzgerald, of Westchester County, declared that there were no new developments in the poison end of the case. He said he had been disappointed in not getting the report of Dr. A. O. Gettler, toxicologist, but that Dr. Gettler had promised it to him today. He was asked:

"Have you any evidence of foul play?"

"None that I will mention," he replied.

In reply to a statement issued by Charles Webb, his first since the death of his wife, in which he declared he believed the death of Mrs. Webb was from natural causes, and in which he charged Dr. Meyer with excluding him from the sick room, Dr. Meyer issued a counter statement, saying:

"I am perfectly willing to accept responsibility for whatever happened in the sick room after I took charge. I did exclude Webb from the room. Everybody about the Westchester-Biltmore Club knows that.

"If I had not excluded Webb, Mrs. Webb would not have lived as long as she did. As near as I can recollect, it was a week or ten days before my patient's death that I barred Webb.

MEYER NOT WORRIED

"Webb insisted upon attempting to bring business matters to her attention. But it was not because of this fact that I forbade him to come into the room. I cannot say now what my reason was.

"Webb never asked why he was barred? Nor did Mrs. Webb ever ask for him. I am not disturbed over this attack. The man who asked a friend some days ago, 'Why am I suspected?' now, through his attorney, has answered the question.

"I also refused admittance to Dr. Davenport West, kidney specialist, who had treated Mrs. Webb in Roosevelt Hospital and who was called in by Webb at the last minute. When Dr. West arrived after Webb was dying."

REV. MR. PAINE'S RESIGNATION NOT ACCEPTED

The Rev. George Lyman Paine, who kissed the pretty wife of Lieutenant Wesley McLaren Hague U. S. N., during a tickling fest in a timothy hay meadow at Belmont, will continue in his office as executive secretary of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches.

In a special meeting of the officers and directors of the Federation, which lasted for five hours, the resignation of the Rev. Mr. Paine was rejected by a vote of 27 to 4. His kissing of the naval officer's wife was declared to be "without evil intent," although "essentially an offense against high manners and the highest type of behavior."

Rev. W. Harry Freda

Rev. George Lyman Paine

DISSENTING VOTE.

The dissenting members were: Rev. W. W. Dechard of the Free Baptist Church, Roxbury; Rev. J. M. Shepler, district superintendent of the Methodist Church; Mrs. Hiram Lathop and Rev. W. Harry Freda of the Clarendon Street Baptist Church. The minority voted thus, believing, they said, that the incident which led to Rev. Mr. Paine's proffered resignation had impaired his usefulness as secretary.

Mrs. Wesley M. Hague

Lt. Wesley M. Hague

In a statement given to the newspapers the officers of the Federation declared in part:

"Basing our judgment not simply upon his testimony, but also upon a signed statement of Lieutenant Hague to the effect that neither he nor his wife believed at any time that there was any evil intent in Mr. Paine's action, we judge this to have been essentially an offense against high manners and the highest type of behavior.

ACT CRITICISED.

"That while strongly condemning this type of behavior as likely to impair the true standards of propriety we recognize that the folly and unwisdom of this act has been freely and frankly acknowledged, and should be treated accordingly.

"That in the light of the above facts for this board to accept the resignation of Mr. Paine would be to acquiesce in a false and sinister interpretation of his offence contrary to fact."

"East Side Caruso" Shareholders See Tenor Sail

New York, Oct. 3.—Angelo Raggini, the "East Side Caruso," sails for Rome on the Conte Rosso today to cultivate the voice which recently was capitalized by admiring friends at 400 shares of $25 par value stock.

Scores of shareholders were down to the pier to bid good-by to their investment.

Recently Raggini intended to sail for Italy to study voice. The Metropolitan Opera House was his goal. But he lacked sufficient funds, so his friends came forward, organized the stock company, and sold shares on his prospects.

Giacome Lauri-Volpi, Metropolitan Opera tenor, will meet the young Caruso in Rome and be his mentor during his period of training.

SOCIALISTS WIN FIRST ROUND IN BERLIN

Essen, Oct. 3 (I.N.S.)—French troops today seized 700,000,000,000 marks intended for the payroll at the Krupp plant.

Berlin, Oct. 3 (I.N.S.)—Socialist members of the Stresemann Government today won the first round of the battle to create a new coalition cabinet with Nationalists represented. The Socialists not only withstood all efforts to force them out but all attempts to bring in Nationalists.

Ex-Crown Prince Vanishes on Mysterious Mission

Amsterdam, Oct. 3 (I.N.S.)—The former German Crown Prince living in exile upon the Island of Wieringen, departed today on a mysterious mission.

The ex-Crown Prince was accompanied by the burgomaster of Wieringen as he crossed to the mainland. A courier had arrived at Wieringen from Munich Monday night, evidently with dispatches bearing upon the Nationalist movement in Bavaria.

Ruhr Cities Agree to Pay Invaders

Dusseldorf, Oct. 3. (A.P.)—Six cities in the occupied area have recognized that the true standards of propriety we recognize that the folly and unwisdom of this act has been freely and frankly acknowledged, and should be treated accordingly.

"That in the light of the above facts for this board to accept the resignation of Mr. Paine would be to acquiesce in a false and sinister interpretation of his offence contrary to fact."

COURT ENJOINS KLAN VOTE

retary of State. The action was brought by Mr. Walton as Governor.

The State Capitol was again under guard of State troops today. Frank Carter, chairman of the State Corporation Commission, declared it was his understanding that the guards were under orders to prevent certification to the State election board of returns.

No explanation of the guards' reappearance could be obtained from the adjutant general's office.

Klan Vote Sweeps All of Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, Oct. 3.—The impeachment measure directed against Governor J. C. Walton is winning by a ratio of 4 to 1, according to unofficial returns compiled today from yesterday's State-wide election.

Returns from 1,419 precincts out of 2,827 showed that 152,214 voted for Initiative Petition No. 79 and 38,924 against.

"Walton has been repudiated," Representative W. D. McBee, leader in the spectacular fight against the Governor, declared.

Walton had nothing to say beyond this:

"I am still Governor. Furthermore, the fight on the Ku Klux Klan is only starting. I am not at all discouraged."

Friends of Governor Walton today called attention to the "silent vote" which was not recorded in yesterday's election figures.

Not more than 250,000 voted, if that many, they asserted. They pointed out, further, that when Walton was elected Governor last November more than 500,000 votes were cast. The Governor's majority then was 49,000.

The 150,000 who did not vote yesterday were for the Governor, they said.

The Ku Klux Klan vote turned out practically en masse.

One significant feature was the fact that comparatively few negroes voted. On all sides today people were asking when, in view of the vote on "79," will the Legislature meet for the purpose of impeachment of Governor Walten?

"No. 79" gave them authority to assemble without the consent of the Governor.

SHEIK WITH 150 SUITS VISITS HIS OLD HOME

Castellaneta, Italy, Oct. 3.—Rudolfe Raphaelo d'Antaguilla had come home—with 150 suits, more clothes than all the rest of the town. D'Antaguilla, alias Valentino, alias the sheik, was acclaimed as the town's greatest citizen when he motored into the main street, with his wife, Winifred Hudnut.

Rodolph Valentino

Practically the entire population of 3,000 was out to greet him.

When Valentino stopped motor to get his bearings, little children ran up and felt the fine cloth of the film star and his artistic wife. They had never seen such costumes or such a motor car before.

Valentino immediately recognized his sister, Angelina, although they had not seen each other since he left to seek his fortune, eighteen years ago.

He lifted the girl to the seat of the motor and drove to the family cottage, where his infirm father waited.

After visiting with his father and sister for a few hours, Valentino startled the natives by walking through the crooked streets of the old village in a golf suit.

He went to see Giuseppe, the cobbler whose shop he used to visit when a boy. Valentine sat down upon a greasy workbench and told his old friend all about it, heedlessly ruining the trousers of one of his 150 suits.

Valentino plans to take his father and sister through Italy on a motor trip.

O'Leary succeeds Louis Wymbs. Other officers elected were Miss Finn, deputy; Francis Healy, chancellor, and Sidney McMahon, lecturer.

DESTROYER IN TEST CRUISE OFF MAINE

Rockland, Maine, Oct. 3.—The destroyer Putnam went on the Rockland course today for standardization, resuming a series of experimental trials which were begun this Fall. The Government is making an intricate set of tests to determine the effect of different displacements on speed, also what effect feeding of the bottom has on speed. The results of last Fall's tests were satisfactory with the exception of the horse-power data, according to the officials and today's restandardization was for statistical information in that respect.

DIVORCED FROM MATE SHE WED TWICE

Newport, R. I., Oct. 3.—Again exercising the feminine prerogative of changing her name, Mrs. Iva C. Finn of Newport was granted in the Superior Court a divorce from Frank A. Finn, whom she married in 1909, divorced in 1918 and remarried Oct. 17, 1921.

Her petition was granted on grounds of gross misbehavior, cruelty and continued drunkenness. Mrs. Finn was given the right to resume her maiden name.

How Rich Are We?

FRANK JAMES, called hopelessly insane, trying to escape from Matteawan Asylum, received a hard blow on the head. It restored his reason. From a violent young criminal he has changed to a model young man.

That seems to be the cure that Europe needs. And the blow on the head won't be long delayed for somebody.

ENGLISH TAXES are three times as high as ours. You know what ours are, and what a terrible pain they give to our prosperous ones.

GERMAN POLICE and military authorities are locking up and shooting down Royalist gentlemen who think Germany needs another dose of Kaiserism. The most hopeful sign in Europe is the continued existence of the German Republic.

MUSTAPHA KEMAL says American ships "profane" the sacred waters of the Dardanelles. He orders them out, and they are going if they haven't already gone.

Don't you think it fortunate this nation was not tricked or wheedled into accepting that Armenian mandate? Had we accepted it we should be at war. Young Americans would be slipped across the ocean and England's taxes would NOT be three times as big as ours.

THE ALLIES have all marched out of Constantinople, withdrawing their troops, politely saluting Mohammed's flag with the crescent in departing.

The Muezzin still drones his call to prayers from the towers of St. Sofia, beautiful Christian church that the Christian could not keep. "Kicking Turkey out of Europe" again turns into a farce.

Nothing succeeds like a good fighter. Kemal is a good fighter.

STATISTICS PUT the wealth of the United States, everything included, at three hundred thousand million dollars.

Taxation assessment on New York City's real estate is increased, this year, more than one thousand millions. The total assessed value of New York is eleven billion and a quarter. It would be impossible to guess the total wealth of the United States, with several cities that will soon be bigger than New York is now —Chicago, Los Angeles, Seattle, Detroit among others.

"HENRY FORD will rival Standard Oil, and supply those that use Ford cars with gasoline at 16 cents a gallon, or less." That is the latest. If not true, it's a pleasant dream.

Queer that no automobile manufacturer has thought of supplying buyers of his cars with the two essentials, fuel at the lowest commercial price, garages at reasonable cost. To store a cheap car in the outskirts costs as much per square foot as to rent a first-class store in a city. At the end of the year the owner has paid as much for storage as he paid for the car.

IF FORD MEANS to compete with Standard Oil his views have changed. Some time ago, at Dearborn, Mr. Ford said he considered the Standard Oil Company one of the best, if not the best, managed business concerns in the United States.

ELOPER IS THREATENED WITH JAIL ON RETURN

Wife Nos. 1 and 3 Tells of the Merrimack Innkeeper's Mania for Young Girls

Massachusetts State police are investigating the legality of the four marriages of George J. Christie, proprietor of the Monomack Inn in Merrimac, former actor and former Federal dry agent, who eloped to Savannah, Ga., with pretty Lena Ollis, eighteen-year-old Marrimack telephone operator. Mrs. Dora M. Roberts Christie Breed Christie, wife Nos. 1 and 3, believes Christie's first two marriages are the only legal ones.

Christie will be arrested by the State police when he arrives in Haverhill from Savannah with his bride and brother-in-law. He will be charged with abducting Lena Ollis. He may be held for the Georgia authorities on a charge of bigamy or polygamy. The Georgia authorities say Christie told them his marriage to Dora Breed Christie had been annulled. The Nebraska authorities may also prefer charges against Christie.

MARRIED AT 17.

According to Mrs. Dora Breed Christie, she first married Christie when she was a high school student of seventeen years. Christie was then twenty years old. Two years later, he deserted her and her year-old son and went to Omaha, Neb., from which city he wrote her he was obtaining a divorce from her on grounds of desertion.

In Omaha, Christie married Stella Murphy, with whom he lived until he returned to Haverhill five years ago and chanced to meet Mrs. Dora Breed Christie on the street. Two weeks later he remarried his first wife in Portsmouth, N. H. He lived with her until two months ago, when he filed annulment proceedings, alleging that Dora Breed Christie, who after being divorced from Christie had re-married and re-divorced, did not have an absolute divorce decree.

QUESTIONS DIVORCE.

Mrs. Dora Breed Christie believes that Christie did not obtain a divorce from Stella Murphy of Omaha. She knows his second marriage to her has not been annulled.

"After my second marriage to George Christie," said Mrs. Dora Breed Christie, "all went well until last November, when I learned he was keeping company with Lena Ollis. I learned the two had frequent parties at a hotel in Salem, On Christmas eve I saw a $150 ring he bought for Lena Ollis, and I saw a bill for it. And I saw the same ring on Lena Ollis' hand.

"I pleaded with him to leave the girl alone, and to devote his time to running his hotel. I gave him my life's savings, $1,500, to pay a mortgage against the hotel. I gave the money I saved in a Christmas savings fund to pay the taxes.

KILLS MAN TO COLLECT INSURANCE

Slayer Doesn't Even Know the Identity of Man He Substituted for Himself

Eureka, Cal., Oct. 3.—Alex Kels, wealthy butcher, of Lodi, Cal., confessed to authorities today that he killed a stranger on his ranch, near Lodi, September 12, set fire to a haystack near his automobile to burn the body, and disappeared, to enable his wife to collect insurance amounting to $100,000.

Announcement of the confession was made by M. G. Goodward, assistant district attorney, after he and Sheriff Hicks had questioned Kels for nearly four hours.

Kels told the officers, they said, his action was taken because he was in financial distress. He did not know the man he killed.

For nearly three weeks the body had been believed to be that of Kels. It was buried after one of the most elaborate funeral services ever held in San Joaquin County.

Kels told the authorities he had expected his wife would get the insurance money enabling her to discharge business obligations he had contracted. His wife, an expectant mother, is in a serious condition. She has not been told Kels is alive. He said he had been traveling throughout the Southwest since his disappearance.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG ACCUSED

Los Angeles, Oct. 3.—The name of Clara Kimball Young, screen favorite, figured in the courts here when Joseph Sachs, Pasadena milliner, in answering his wife's separate maintenance suit, declared Mrs. Sachs had abandoned him at the urgent request of the actress.

The milliner charged his wife, a sister of Harry Carson, movie producer, is living with Miss Young.

Sachs said when Mrs. Sachs came home after being in the company of motion picture people she had a strong odor of intoxicating liquor on her breath.

Find Hacked Body, Headless

Pittsburgh, Oct. 2.—The body of a man was found today in a shed used as a girl's dressing room at pools along the Monongahela River. The head was missing and detectives said it probably had been tossed into the river. It had apparently been cut off with an axe or a razor.

BARS MILLIONAIRES SEEKING FAME IN FILMDOM

Los Angeles, Oct. 3.—The story of three young millionaires who came to Hollywood to break into the movies—and failed—became known here today.

Craig Biddle, known as the "millionaire extra man," is now trying his hand at selling California real estate. His brother, Drexel, is working on the oil fields near here. Both young men are scions of the well-known Philadelphia family.

Park Benjiman, Jr., a brother-in-law of the late Enrico Caruso, is working with Drexel Biddle.

PARIS GREEN IN WELL; LIVES OF 6 IN DANGER

Taunton, Oct. 2.—A plot to poison an entire family is seen in the finding by Mrs. Louis Smith of an eight-ounce box of paris green in a crevice of a well on the farm of Peter Gustafson, West avenue, Seekonk.

Mrs. Smith, a neighbor of the Gustafson family, obtains drinking water for herself, her husband and her four children from the Gustafson well. She had gone to the well to draw water when she chanced to see the box of poison.

She told the Gustafson family of finding the box, and the State authorities were immediately notified. Detective Francis W. Clemmey was assigned to the case.

Clemmey believes the finding of the box thwarted a plot to poison the entire Gustafson family. He does not believe the plot was directed against the Smith family. Revenge is thought to be the motive.

WEBSTER FULL OF 'FLAPPERS'; ASSESSORS LIST STIRS TOWN

Webster, Oct. 3.—Joe Miller and Henry Ford joke books are antiquated. The assessors' list for Webster was out today and it is crammed full of local hits from cover to cover.

It lists all the men and women in town, with their addresses, occupations and—even with the women —ages.

It appears nearly all women in the town are flappers. A few men find their wives listed as "housekeepers" instead of housewives. Some men, erroneously tabulated as dry goods dealers, are indignant at the way some folks are eyeing them as they strut around town.

The edition is limited to 550 and will be exhausted early as the rush is big.

MEXICAN SOLONS IN BATTLE; ONE SHOT; CROWD CHEERS

Mexico City, Oct. 3.—The lobbies of the Lower House of Congress were the scene of a lively battle when two deputies fought out a personal dispute.

Deputy Mena Cordova fired three shots at his colleague, Rueda Leon. Those in the galleries thought a fight was on between supporters of General Plutarco Calles and Adolfo de la Huerta. There were shouts of "Viva Calles" and "Viva de la Huerta," while on the floor other representatives used their fists on each other.

BEATING DAZES WIFE A WEEK; SHE DIVORCES FITCHBURG MATE

Fitchburg, Oct. 3.—Mrs. Louise L. Cummings was beaten by her husband so badly once, according to divorce testimony today, she was dazed for a week. He is William T. Cummings, West Newton druggist. She was granted a divorce here today on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. They had been married thirty-five years.

The principal witness was Mrs. Morton E. Converse of Winchendon, wife of a millionaire toy manufacturer and well-known in society. She said she had seen Cummings beat his wife.

The Cummingses have four children, among them a twin boy and girl. The latter is Margaret, student at the Lasell Seminary, Auburndale.

Mrs. Cummings operates a select boarding house in Winchendon.

PLOT TO MURDER KING ALFONSO

Madrid, Oct. 3. (I.N.S.)—Assassination of King Alfonso was discussed at the time of the funeral of Premier Dato, according to testimony given today by Miguel Matea, one of the two prisoners on trial, charged with killing the late premier.

Matea swore he participated in the killing of Senor Dato and attended the public funeral in company of an anarchist named Casanellas who proposed to take advantage of the opportunity to kill the king. Matea declared he dissuaded Casanellas.

He testified, further, that a plot to assassinate former Premier Romanones was hatched in the home of ex-Minister Musitu, but the conspirators were unable to carry it out.

After Matea had made these declarations, his lawyer asked that he be discharged because he had turned State's evidence. The court refused.

KIDNAPED BOY YIELDS TO PLEA FOR PHOTO

Beautiful Widow Works on Fugitive Swindler Until He Capitulates

Mexico City, Oct. 3.—The light that lied—and lied and lied—in the eyes of a beautiful widow in the foreign colony here, lured David Lamar out of the security of a false name and virtually into the reach of the arm of the law.

Lamar, famous as "the Wolf of Wall Street," has been living here under the name of Ernest Lamar Lehmann. He was free under $1,000 bail and likewise was under a year's sentence to prison when he disappeared. That was about nine months ago.

David Lamar.

A photograph of Ernest Lamar Lehmann was wired by the United States Department of Justice agents.

"Get it," they told the beautiful woman. "But don't let him suspect he is under surveillance."

SIGHED FOR PHOTO.

Then began a game between "the wolf" and the widow. She allowed him to think her heart was wholly his. He entertained her expensively. They were seen together at fashionable clubs. Always, at parties, balls and on motor rides, the beautiful woman had eyes only for David Lamar.

"I should like to have a picture of you," she sighed one day. "I must have something to remind me of you when you are absent from me."

David Lamar, the "Wolf of Wall Street," who had duped some of the smartest men in New York, became a fish.

The man who served two years at Atlanta and by using a writ of habeas corpus managed to get bail while he was under sentence of a year in New Jersey, went to a fashionable photographer and posed.

FIGHTS DEPORTATION.

The pictures were soft-toned, but not so soft as the tones of the beautiful woman who received them.

The photographs went to Washington and were compared with other photographs.

It was established that Ernest Lamar Lehman was David Lamar.

At once he was ordered deported from Mexico, but took an appeal while American agents waited for him just over the border. He is still fighting for his right to remain in Mexico, but his case seems hopeless.

As hopeless, perhaps, as was the "Wolf's" love for his beautiful widow, whose eyes lied and lied and lied.

FEATURE OXEN TODAY AT BIG OUTDOOR SHOW

Brockton, Oct. 3.—Today was New England Day at the Brockton Fair.

A crowd which by sundown, officials estimated, would approach 100,000, flowed in from all parts of New England. They came in every kind of a vehicle imaginable. One-horse shays filled in behind limousines. Racing cars rubbed hubs with old-fashioned bicycles.

In the spot light today, the second day of the fair, were oxen. Draft oxen, sad-faced and plodding. They were entered in a prize contest. Fall River entered two prize teams, property of the government's forestry department. Other teams were entered by a dozen different cities.

Next in the limelight was the horse show with 1,500 entries to be judged today. Blue-blooded thoroughbreds cantered in two large rings while judges looked on. Pony classes were the mecca for appreciative youngsters. They stopped about drawing little masters or mistresses in polished "dog carts."

Other features today were flying stunts, the midway, shoe factory, auto show, agricultural display

ROXBURY WIFE WINS CUSTODY OF TWO BOYS

Friends of Mrs. May Sterns of Dudley street, Roxbury, are congratulating her today upon her victory in obtaining custody of her two children, Leonard, nine, and Seymour, seven, following a battle in the Suffolk Probate Court. She was also awarded $15 a week separate support.

The kiddies have been at the home of their paternal grandmother in Maplewood since their father, Max Sterns, took them there recently. The mother wept when she greeted them in court.

The mother's victory came after her husband had accused her of being friendly with several men who he claimed, took her automobile riding. He testified she was away from home an average of three nights a week until 1 or 2 A. M., and stated he sought an explanation as to her whereabouts she answered "Go to h— and find out" or "I'll send you a telegram and tell you where I've been."

He also testified that one of their last quarrels came when he questioned her about mentoring with a Mr. Jackson. He denied trying to make a "date" with Etta Hamburger, his wife's friend.

He also denied threatening to club his wife's head with a large "billy," produced in evidence, if she did not bring the children back from a camp where she had removed them.

Mrs. Sterns and her witnesses testified to several alleged acts of cruelty on the husband's part. They said he slapped and nagged h

PROBATION FOR PAIR SEIZED IN RAID

George McNulty and Anne Allen, his sister-in-law, both of Stoughton, faced Judge Weston in Roxbury Court today on statutory charges and were found guilty. They were arrested a week ago in an apartment on Batavia street, Back Bay.

Jail sentences of one year were imposed and the pair put on probation for six months. McNulty is married to the woman's sister, Helen, from whom he has been separated for some time.

JULIUS BARNES BARES SECRET OF SUCCESS IN BUSINESS

RECREATION ESSENTIAL TO HEALTH

Commerce Chamber Head Declares All Workers Should Have a Hobby

"The average man works harder keeping physically fit than he does managing his business.

"I know successful financiers who are expert carpenters or spend their spare time raising chickens," said Julius H. Barnes, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, which meets this week at the Copley Plaza Hotel.

"Recreation is expensive for a busy man," he explained. "It often figures in actual dollars and cents and loss of time, but no one who wants to make a success in any line of business can afford to do without it."

Julius H. Barnes.

"Swimming is my hobby," said Mr. Barnes enthusiastically. "I often believe I couldn't get through the day without my morning plunge. It keeps me fit for the long hours I have to put in."

With a smile he confessed to working fifteen hours a day, but added that one of these hours is always devoted to a walk to the athletic association, followed by a twenty-minute swim.

Mr. Barnes does not prescribe only the more conventional types of sport.

IN STRAWBERRY PATCH.

"Most people think that recreation means golf, tennis, swimming or perhaps dancing in an overheated ballroom," Mr. Barnes shook his head vigorously.

"To find a banking authority hoeing his strawberry patch or an investment broker speculating on a particular breed of rabbits does not cause me any surprise. Every man or woman must find something that is entirely separate from their daily grind that will take his or her mind off work for a few hours a day anyway."

"Look around this room," he said with a gesture that included the members of the Chamber of Congress that were assembling for the noon meeting. "Every man here is a successful business man, and do you know that many of them work harder trying to keep fit than they do at their business."

RECREATION ESSENTIAL.

Mr. Barnes explained that one of the reasons why so many men were nervous or physical wrecks at 35 or 40 was because they wouldn't give nature a chance. Employers all over the country are recognizing how important it is to fit up gymnasiums, roof gardens and swimming pools for the men and women who work for them, he said.

"You can't work a machine overtime for a long period or the parts will give out, and you can't work a man eight days a week and expect him to stand the physical strain any better.

"Whether a man swims, plays golf or weeds his garden," said Mr. Barnes, "he ought to get out in the open air and sunshine. He gets a bigger return in health in an hour in the open than he would on any investment or big deal he might put through at the office in the same time. There are some men," he continued, "whose time is valued at thousands of dollars, yet they know the value of an afternoon around the links or a cross-country walk, and never stop to count the cost as loss of time."

PAYS BIG DIVIDENDS

Mr. Barnes said that it stands to reason a man should become increasingly valuable and useful in business as he grows older. He hesitated and rubbed his hand across his forehead with a characteristic gesture.

CHARGE 'SECRET EVIDENCE' IN SACCO CASE

By BERT FORD

Affidavits by jurors in the original trial of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti that William H. Ripley, foreman, made use of secret evidence to obtain convictions, will be the subject of a special motion in their fight for a new trial.

This was decided today before

Judge Thayer

Atty. Fred H. Moore

Judge Webster Thayer in Dedham court when the Ripley motion, the first of five to be made by the defense, came up.

It was objected to by District Attorney Harold P. Williams. Judge

Arthur D. Hill

Judge T. F. McAnarney

Thayer asked counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti if they would agree to make a special motion in order to separate the Ripley affidavits from the other motions.

They agreed.

The affidavits allege that Ripley, a Quincy contractor, had three .38 calibre cartridges in the jury bedroom, which he used for comparison to determine the value of evidence.

Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted of murdering a shoe plant paymaster and his guard. Their case has drawn international attention.

The Daily affidavit, as it is known, was objected to by District Attorney Williams as part of the Ripley motion. It was agreed to separate them.

The Daily affidavit declares that W. H. Daly heard Ripley, several days before the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti, say that "men of that type ought to be hanged." Daly declared Ripley was talking about Sacco and Vanzetti.

A spirited oral tilt, with memory of it, occurred between Judge Thayer and Judge Thomas McAnarney, of counsel for the defence.

WORLD CONFERENCE AWAITS U. S. ENVOYS

Brussels, Oct. 3.—In conformity with the American government's request, due to the impossibility of the delegates from the United States arriving in time, the maritime diplomatic conference, to begin today, was postponed to Saturday. Thirteen countries, including Germany, will take part. The American delegates, who also represented the United States at last year's international conference on maritime law here are—Judge Charles M. Hough, president of the Maritime Law Association, of New York, and Norman B. Beecher, admiralty counsel of the Shipping Board.

FIVE BOYS ARE SEIZED IN NEWPORT

Newport, R. I., Oct. 3.—Loot valued at $1,000 was recovered with the arrest of five Newport boys, all under sixteen years of age, charged with a series of burglaries. The arrests followed investigation of the recent break in Tippitt's hardware store, and revealed connections with four others, three of which had not been reported.

The loot was found in a barn, that resembled a mail order storehouse, and it included everything from rifles and ammunition to cigarettes and clothing. It is believed the boys twice raided the Summer home of Charles M. Osirichs on Kay street and that of R. R. Smith on Washington street. A bumboat off Long Wharf was also looted.

The boys will be tried in Newport Juvenile Court.

Try to Steal Deadly Hooded Cobras in Bronx Zoo

New York, Oct. 3 (I.N.S.)—Thieves attempted to break into the snake cage of the Bronx Zoo and make off with the four hooded cobras there.

The bite of the cobra is fatal in two hours and those in the zoo are still possessed of all their dental equipment.

A hole four inches in diameter was bored in the wooden door of the cage. Nearby was a violin case with holes bored in it, presumably to have been used in carting off the swag. The thieves were evidently frightened off.

HUSBAND LOST BRIDE AT SOUTH STATION

Mrs. Leon Houle, eighteen-year-old Charlestown bride, disappeared mysteriously on her honeymoon, when her husband left her for a moment in South Station to check their baggage.

Houle says he left his wife standing near a magazine stand after they arrived in South Station from New York, while he went to check some hat boxes and other baggage. When he returned to the place where he had left her she had vanished.

Houle said he met his wife in New York, where she had gone from her home in Charlestown to go on the stage. She failed to realize her aspirations and was greatly discouraged when she met Houle, a veteran of the World War, who lost his right arm in battle.

The couple were married and proceeded to Boston on their honeymoon which was interrupted by the young wife's disappearance. Houle explained that he had intended to proceed to Newburyport with his bride to visit relatives there.

Scrap Iron Man Fights Assessment Placed on His Rare Old Paintings

New York, Oct. 2 (U.S.).—Corregio, Corte and Paolo Veronese, who received but paltry reward for their great paintings, would surely squirm in their hallowed tombs if they could know that Eli Joseph, a scrap iron dealer, had been classed as the richest man in New York, above even John D. Rockefeller, because Joseph owns certain paintings of the great dead masters.

Joseph is now in Paris and the personal property assessment list for 1924, just issued for the city of New York, shows him at the head of the list with $3,000,000 assessed.

Norman W. Kornigold, counsel for Joseph, said the assessment was absurd and unwarranted, because it was made on the strength of a collection of paintings Joseph recently acquired in Italy. The paintings were secured from the Barbiana Palace, Bologna, three years ago, and are insured for $750,000.

The paintings now are in storage here pending the outcome of litigation brought by J. Parvea Carter, an English artist, who was retained by Joseph to restore the fine collection of masterpieces.

U. S. SURVEYORS ESCAPE DEATH IN FLOODED ARIZONA CANYON

Peach Springs, Ariz., Oct. 3.—Four days behind their expected arrival at Diamond Creek trail, the ten members of a government survey party emerged from the Grand Canyon of the Colorado at that point. Because of flood waters sweeping through the gorge it was feared the small boats in which the party is making its way down the river would be dashed to pieces against the canyon walls.

The flood did catch them in the gorge, they related, but they escaped the fury of the rivers by climbing through a crevice. A courier who brought word of the party's safe arrival said all were well.

The party is making a survey of uncharted stretches of the Colorado.

SALOON MEN DEFY PINCHOT AND OPEN UP AS USUAL

Philadelphia, Oct. 3.—In accordance with orders from Governor Pinchot and the Federal Department of Justice, a force of 100 operatives continued today to serve closing notices on the 1,500 saloon keepers in and about Philadelphia, giving them 48 hours in which to quit business, dismantle their fixtures and close their doors. The majority opened their places today as usual.

The order handed to the proprietors is signed by Harry M. Daugherty, Attorney General of the United States, and George Woodruff, head of the Pennsylvania Legal Department. It was announced by Governor Pinchot that this procedure would be followed until all 67 counties of Pennsylvania are dry.

PURSUE AUTOIST WHO INJURED GIRL

Llewellyn G. Farnum of Uxbridge was pursued and overtaken by several young men in an auto when, it is alleged, he attempted to flee after running down and injuring Miss Agnes Harris of No. 72 Peterborough street, Back Bay, with his automobile on Boylston street at Charlesgate East. Following the accident, the police say, the young men chased Farnum until he reached Mechanics Building, at West Newton street, where he stopped. The pursuers then informed a patrolman of the affair and Farnum was arrested on a drunkenness charge.

case that is so small that it may be carried in the vest pocket.

CLIP COUPON EARLY.

But it is true. The expense connected with the offer is tremendous, but the Boston American is always on the job to provide benefits to its thousands of readers.

While the supply of these razors seems inexhaustible we advise each reader to clip the coupons early so that this wonderful opportunity will not be missed. Offers like these come but seldom in the lifetime of ordinary man; don't miss the chance to take advantage of this one.

It is the first time that a genuine Auto-Strop safety razor complete with strop and case has ever been offered at such a ridiculously low figure. It may never happen again. Now is the time.

SALESMEN INSTRUCTED.

The big staff of salesmen who handle the distribution of the Boston American throughout Greater Boston have received personal instruction regarding the rapid distribution of these razors so no one will be delayed in receiving a set on presentation of two coupons and 36 cents at any of the distributing stations. These men know the value of a good safety razor. They use them every day. They can tell you what the famous Auto-Strop safety razor is and what it will do. They are anxious to see that every reader of the Boston American receives one of these razors.

They are at your command if you have any questions to ask. Just drop in at any of the distributing stations and the attendant there will tell you all the fine points.

Early yesterday morning, long before the ordinary man is out of bed, these salesmen assembled at the office of the Boston American where they were given instructions by M. S. Lunn, circulation manager of the Boston American, regarding the distribution of these razors.

The good points of the razor that a novice might not know were explained fully to them by Mr. Lunn.

ALL ENTHUSIASTIC.

They left the meeting filled with as much enthusiasm regarding the Auto-Strop razor as the thousands who will clip the coupons today will have when they get their razor.

This offer made by the Boston American has no strings attached. There is no red tape, no condition, no work. All the reader has to do is clip the coupon from two Boston Americans on two consecutive days, present the coupons with thirty-six cents at any of the distributing stations and the handsome and useful Auto-Strop razor belongs to him or her.

If you prefer doing business by mail, just add four cents for postage and mail the coupon and thirty-six cents to the Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass., and the razor will be mailed you.

Today is the day. Watch for the first coupon and be sure and clip it. Thursday clip the second. Then rush it to the Boston American list of distributing stations will be published so you may get the razor near your home.

read in the newspapers that George Christie had filed annulment proceedings against me. I was frantic. I got my son—his son, and Frank Christie, his brother, to go with me, and we pleaded with him to leave the ollis girl alone and drop the annulment proceedings. We didn't get much satisfaction.

"All he said was: 'Don't get excited, Dora. I believe my marriage to you in Portsmouth was illegal. My friends tell me you hadn't been divorced from Breed long enough. They say you should have waited six months.'

She told of having received a letter from Christie, handed to her by a chauffeur known to the family as "Tom," the day after Christie left for the South.

"Dear Dora," the letter began, "I am leaving in response to a telephone and wire from McAlester, Okla. If conditions are O. K. when I arrive I will send for you. If not, I will return at once. My expenses are being paid, so I lose nothing."

Dora added:

"He has a fondness for young girls. I was seventeen when I first married him. Stella Murphy was eighteen. Lena Ollis is eighteen. And there have been other women in his life, all of them young.

TENANTS FIGHT BROOKLINE RENT RAISE

Sixteen tenants of the apartment house at No. 83 Harvard street, Brookline, were notified by their landlord, George Daley, of rent increases ranging from 20 to 40 per cent. Some of the tenants declare they will vacate.

Daley, who conducts a drug store at Harvard street and Aspinwall avenue, recently bought the property from F. S. Welch. Tenants declare many of the suites are in poor repair and that the increase is not justified at this time.

Daley declared he had not increased the rents for old tenants, but that the new scale has gone into effect gradually as new tenants entered the building. He declared the assessed valuation of the building had been increased from $70,000 to $84,000 this year, and that the increases were made necessary by the extra tax burden and by certain necessary repairs which he proposes to make during the year.

He said he had increased the rents only after careful consideration, and that he considered the new schedule a fair one. He said $26 corner suites had been increased to $57.50, and front three-room suites from $36 to $45. He declared he had given the tenants a month's notice in each instance.

BOSTON-BOUND BEEF TRAIN WRECKED NEAR DANBURY

Millplain, Ct., Oct. 3.—Two cars of a Boston-bound beef train on the New Haven railroad left the tracks and were hurled against a train on the westbound track between here and Danbury. Traffic on three divisions of the railroad was halted until the wreckage was cleared away. Wreck trains from Danbury and other points were despatched to the scene of the wreck, and traffic restored by night. No one was injured so far as could be learned. The cause of the accident has not been determined.

Are you afraid to face the scales?

DO you walk around the town with a pocket full of pennies, fascinated by the thought that some scale may register your weight a few pounds lighter?

Many women do—yet it's quite unnecessary if one will only give up a few fattening foods, and substitute tasty, nourishing dishes that do not add weight.

Make these light, delicious muffins and biscuits yourself, so that they will give the minimum of fuel value. Substitute them for wheat bread or richer bread-stuffs, and they will go a long way toward helping you diet easily.

NOTE: Instead of using rich, whole butter, try diluting a pound of butter with a pint of evaporated milk. Beat well, together, and you will find it palatable, yet not fattening.

ONE DIVORCE TO EVERY SEVEN MARRIAGES GRANTED IN THE U. S.

WEDDINGS DECREASE FOR YEAR

148,554 Couples Seek Freedom in 1923; Nevada Mecca of Divorce Hunters

Washington, Oct. 3.—One divorce to 7.6 marriages in the United States last year is the record disclosed by the Census Bureau's marriage and divorce survey, the first since 1916, when there was only one divorce to almost 9.3 marriages.

There were one-fifth more divorces and about one-fiftieth fewer marriages per 100,000 of population last year than in 1916. The statistics, which include figures for every State, were issued without comment.

There were 1,154,415 marriages recorded last year, while in 1916 there were 1,040,634, showing a numerical increase of 84,784. To every 100,000 of population, however, there were only 1,033 marriages in 1922, as compared with 1,095 in 1916, a decrease of 2.08 per cent.

DIVORCES TOTAL 148,554.

Maryland led in the marriage rate with 1,839 per 100,000 in population. Arkansas was second with 1,487, Florida third with 1,463 and Mississippi fourth with 1,454. North Dakota with 675 had the lowest rate.

Divorces granted last year totalled 148,554 for the whole country, against 112,036 in 1914, an increase of 36,518. To each 100,000 of population there were 136 divorces last years as compared with 112 in 1916, an increase of 21.4 per cent.

Texas led the country in the number of divorces in 1922 with a total of 12,389, which was one-fifth of the number of marriages in that State. Illinois was second with the number of divorces with 10,926, Ohio third with 10,182, and California fourth with 9,227.

NEVADA HOLDS RECORD

South Carolina reported no divorces, as its law permits none. The District of Columbia had the smallest number, 161, and the lowest rate per 100,000 population, with 27. New York was second with forty per 100,000, North Carolina third with 50 and North Dakota fourth with 51.

Nevada had the largest number of divorces per 100,000 population, with 1,325, and the number of marriages there was lower than the number of divorces, totaling 1,208 per 100,000 population. Oregon had the second largest number of divorces per 100,000 population, with 311, Oklahoma was third, with 262, and Texas fourth with 259.

There was one divorce to 38.5 marriages in the District of Columbia, to 22.6 marriages in New York, to 19.4 in Georgia and to 16.8 in North Carolina.

AID TO PEDESTRIANS

PROPOSED ELEVATED WALK ON WASHINGTON STREET

Photo-diagram illustrates Boston American correspondent's suggestion whereby sidewalk congestion on Washington street could be relieved by constructing a long elevated walk along east side of street. It is argued that thousands of pedestrians could be accommodated on the overhead walk, thus giving more freedom to vehicular traffic and removing dangers which now exist at junction of Summer and Washington streets, one of the busiest traffic points in the downtown business section.

ELEVATED WALK FOR SHOPPERS PROPOSED

TRAFFIC SUGGESTION NO. 7.

The American prints today another suggestion relating to the simplifying of Boston's ever-growing traffic problems. A correspondent proposes an elevated sidewalk along the east side of Washington street, extending from a point at or near Bedford street to a point near Milk street.

"There will be no thorough solution of the traffic problem without careful consideration of the pedestrian," says the author of this proposal.

"Get the human congestion on Washington street in the big shopping area on an elevated sidewalk and you will give the street back as a main artery for vehicular traffic. That alone would relieve Tremont street.

"An evelated sidewalk with inclines at each end, and stairway entrances at the cross streets, along the east side of Washington street, would take thousands out of the path of vehicles which now endanger their lives.

"Such a sidewalk, stretching across Summer street at Washington, would not only eliminate the constant danger to pedestrains at that busy junction, but would also give much-needed freedom to vehicles. The same relief would apply at Franklin and Avon streets."

BOY FOUND IN STREET, KILLED BY TRUCK

"Mama, a big truck hit the little boy and rasped him over."

This statement of a seven-year-old girl, sobbed out in fright to her mother, solves the mystery of the death of four-year-old Michael Martinuk in a street in Peabody.

Michael was found dying in the gutter in front of No. 89 Walnut street by Cornelius Daley, ice-wagon driver of No. 16 Bow street, Salem. By the time Daley had laid the broken little body on a cot on the floor in the office of the John B. Pickering Company coal office nearby, the child was dead.

The manner of his death remained a mystery until a Boston American reporter located Mary Mahaleris who told the story of Michael's death to her mother, Mrs. Leonidas Mahaleris, No. 81 Walnut street.

Mary declared she had seen Michael hit by a truck and just two or three minutes before he was found by Daley. The girl said the truck went on and did not stop. She does not know whether the driver saw what had happened.

Mary was on an errand for her mother at the time. She said Michael was sitting on the curb as the truck came along.

"He ran out to grab it," Mary explained. "He was struck here and here by the back wheel and fell down."

The findings of the autopsy will be reported today by Medical Examiner H. K. Foster to District Attorney William Clarke of Gloucester, Inspector Edward Pierce of the Peabody police is conducting the investigation.

Dr. Foster told the American reporter that the lad died from some terrific impact. "Had I known of this little girl's story the autopsy would have probably been unnecessary," he said.

How this Peabody child met his death in street was a mystery until another child reported that he had been killed by an auto truck.

BAR TESTIMONY OF 'HUSBAND' IN 'HE-GIRL' CASE

Chicago, Oct. 3.—The first time in the history of jurisprudence that the testimony of a man was excluded in a court because he is the husband of another man, is believed to have occurred here during the trial of Frederick Thompson, accused of the murder of Richard C. Tesmer, during a hold-up last June.

Thompson had posed for twenty years as a woman and for fourteen as the wife of Frank Carrick.

Carrick took the witness stand to testify in behalf of Thompson. When he admitted that he had been married to Thompson Chief Justice John R. Caverly of the Criminal Court sustained an objection by the State that Carrick's testimony must be excluded because husband and wife cannot testify in behalf of one another.

Carrick admitted his marriage to Thompson in 1912.

The State completed its case against the defendant in less than a day, depending principally on the testimony of Mrs. Emma Tesmer, widow of the slain man. Mrs. Tesmer positively identified Thompson as the "laughing, blue-eyed girl" who shot Tesmer.

COAL SHIPMENTS FAR BELOW NEEDS

New York, Oct. 3.—Coal shipments to all parts of the East continue far below the needs, according to the week's issue of the Coal Age. One of the largest companies, the publication asserts, has been making scarcely more than 65 per cent. of its normal output. Shipments for Eastern New York and New England were only 216 cars for the week ending September 22, compared with 1,471 the same period a year ago. The production in that period was only 877,000 tons, against 1,897,000 tons a year ago.

11 EXHAUSTED SAILORS, RESCUED OFF SANDY HOOK, REACH BOSTON

FIGHT GALE IN HELPLESS MOTORBOAT

Picked Up by Liner When They Are Ready to Give Up in Despair

Into Boston today came eleven shipwrecked sailors, rescued from "Davy Jones' locker" by the Merchants and Miners liner Grecian ploughing through a gale off the fishing grounds below Sandy Hook.

For sixty hours they had fought a hurricane in a forty-eight-foot motor boat. Half of them unconscious from exhaustion, the rest blue and numb with cold and barely alive the Grecian appeared as hope had about died.

Today they looked on Boston's sun-kissed harbor and her busy streets and said Jimmy Legs, a burly Swede, by way of prayer, "She be a d—— good sight."

It was the Gertrude, a sturdy motor fishing boat the eleven manned out of Sheepshead Bay on Sunday last, with Captain Frank Rudiger, Brooklyn, skipper, and mate, Bill Mohr. They were bound for Five Fathom Banks for big fish. Somebody put a jinx on the voyage. First they lost the rudder. Then the engine broke down. Came a gale.

"The water she pile in like ——," said Jimmy Legs.

They bailed all day Sunday, all night Sunday, all day Monday, all night Monday. It was bitterly cold. Food gave out, then the water. Men dropped to the deck exhausted, then wearily climbed back to their feet. Combers broke upon them, one after another. The boat was thumped and buffetted. It acted as drunk as the men, blear-eyed and staggering from weakness.

Came Tuesday. The gale abated. But it was still cold. Half of the crew, all recruited in Newark, were on the deck exhausted. The others, parched, looked longingly at the sea. There comes a time when a sailor wants to jump and end his suffering.

That moment was approaching when on the horizon appeared the Grecian, Boston-bound. The rescue, hot blankets, hot broth, sleep and today. "Say," Jimmy Legs talking. "Where can a feller lak me get one fine drink. You know that rescue she bone fine, but they didn't have a drop aboard."

Copley Plaza Dansant Will Attract Society, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN

THE first migration of any importance from the smart Summer colony along the North Shore and elsewhere will take place Saturday when a goodly number of Boston's social register folks gather at the Copley Plaza for the first tea dansant of the season. Of course it takes more than just tea and dancing to enlist the patronage of so many of the socially prominent and this time the Boston Music School Settlement and the Students' Union are to be benefitted.

Besides the desire to help two such worthy causes, there is the great interest to get a peep at the officers of the British battleship Capetown who will be there. And this is manifest not only among the younger set but is shared to a great extent with the older members of society. Indeed we predict that Vice-Admiral Culme-Seymour, K. C. B., M. V. O., commander in chief of the English North American and West Indies Station and his staff, all of whom will be the guests of Major and Mrs. Walter M. Pratt, are going to have a time that will linger long in their memories.

Among the prominent matrons who are sponsoring the cause of music and the students with their names and their presence are Mrs. Louis R. de Steiguer, Mrs. Robert Amory, Mrs. Charles M. Cabot, Mrs. Frederick S. Converse, Miss Margaret L. Corliss, Mrs. Edward Farnham Greene, Mrs. Henry P. Kling, Mrs. Walter M. Pratt, Mrs. F. L. Ames, Mrs. George R. Fearing and Mrs. John L. Saltonstall. In charge of the affair is Mrs. Frederick S. Blodgett, who did such wonderful work with Woman's Day at the Copley Plaza.

TRANS-ATLANTIC boats are bringing back large numbers of Boston society folk.

Among those recently returning on board the Olympic were Mr. and Mrs. A. Winsor Weld and their two daughters, the Misses Louisa and Dorothy Weld. The Welds have opened their Chestnut Hill residence for the Winter. On the same boat were Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Gardiner.

Returning about the same time was that prominent family Dr. and Mrs. Langdon Frothingham and their trio of daughters, the Misses Olga, Ellen and Eugenia. Miss Olga Frothingham was presented last season, at a tea dance at the Chilton Club, given for her by her aunt, Miss Eugenia Frothingham, the authoress.

Other homeward bound Bostonians include Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee, Mrs. J. D. Cameron Bradley and her two sons, Cameron and Montgomery Bradley, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Henry Forbes Bigelow.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT TREAT PAINE and Miss Eleonora Sears were of the Bostonians recently lured by the Fall charms of the Berkshires and motored through to view Autumn in all her glory.

Miss Ellen Bullard and Mr. and Mrs. Gorham Brooks of Boston were among the guests at a large dinner given the other evening in Lenox by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hollister Pease in honor of Miss Alice Eno of New York. Also present at the affair were Mr. and Mrs. David T. Dana, and Mrs. Joseph W. Burdon.

MR. AND MRS. ELIOT WADSWORTH are receiving a host of congratulations upon the birth of a little daughter. Mrs. Wadsworth was formerly Mrs. Guy Scull (Nancy Whitman). Following the marriage of the Wadsworths over a year ago, they have spent as much time as possible at their North Shore home in Gloucester, although, of course Mr. Wadsworth's official duties require not a little of the time to be spent in Washington.

GET GERMAN ENVOY SPEEDING; OFFER BAIL BACK IN MARKS

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 3.—West Virginia has been asked to return $5.60, taken by a town policeman as bond on a speeding charge, to Otto L. Wiedfelt, German ambassador to the United States, it became known today when correspondence on the incident was made public.

The ambassador was stopped in Bolivar, Jefferson County. The officer charged the ambassador with speeding, and was deaf to pleas of diplomatic immunity, threatening to lock up the party. He released them on a bond of $5.60 in the absence of the mayor.

Secretary of State Hughes, when informed of the incident, referred it to Governor Morgan of West Virginia. Efforts are being made by State officials to recover the $5.60.

In a letter to Governor Morgan, C. E. Hiner, State Road Commissioner, said: "I regret exceedingly that I do not have the privilege of refunding this money to his Honor the German Ambassador in person, as I assure you it would give me great pleasure to pay him in German marks."

CHARGE INTIMIDATION TO CLEAR MRS. STOKES

WITNESS FOR STOKES SUES FOR $10,000

Negro Woman Detained by N. Y. Detective Charges Plot of Intimidation

New York Oct. 3.—W. E. D. Stokes, whose suit for divorce has been set down for trial before Justice Mahoney, was at the Grand Central terminal to meet Richard E. Westbrook, a negro lawyer of Chicago.

Westbrook, it was said, brought to New York several of the surprise witnesses whom the plaintiff expects to show that Mrs. Stokes was at one time an inmate of the notorious Everleigh Club resort in Chicago.

Stokes, after meeting Westbrook, declined to discuss his divorce suit or any of the activities of the witnesses.

Attorney Daniel Nugent, representing Mr. Stokes, declared that when the divorce trial is ended he proposes to set under way an investigation of the brutal and humiliating treatment to which certain of the Stokes witnesses have been subjected, particularly by the Chicago authorities.

Coincident with the announcement that witnesses for the plaintiff had been mistreated both here and in Chicago, came the announcement that Detective Bernard A. Flood, attached to the staff of District Attorney Banton, had been made defendant in a $10,000 damage suit filed by Mrs. Nell Rose Miller, a negress.

Mrs. Miller alleges that on September 26 she was taken into custody at the Pennsylvania Station by Flood, who acted upon a telegram from Charles S. Wharton, assistant district attorney at Chicago, requesting that the woman be questioned regarding testimony she had given in connection with the Stokes case.

Mrs. Miller, who was subsequently liberated, alleges that Flood's action was part of a program of intimidation set up against all those who had testified against Mrs. Stokes.

LOVE NOTES IN $10,000 BALM SUIT

Hub Girl Says Suitor Jilted Her for a Rival After Xmas Engagement

Trial of a $10,000 breach-of-promise suit brought by Miss Sarah Goldman, twenty-six, of No. 137 Brighton street, against Harry Levin, Providence and New York furrier, opens in Providence today.

According to Miss Coleman, her engagement to Levin was announced at a party given by her parents on Christmas Day, 1919. The date of the wedding was set for February 12, 1920, four weeks later.

Two weeks before the date set for the wedding Hyman Goldman of Malden, a brother of the bride-to-be, received an announcement of the marriage of Bessie Feldman, an actress, to Levin. The alienation suit was filed soon afterward.

Miss Goldman said that for a year before the announcement party Levin had spent his week-ends at the Goldman home. As the date for the wedding drew near, she said, Levin's letters became more endearing.

"My Dear Sarah," said one of the letters, "the time is only a few weeks away. It seems that I cannot wait for the time to come. We will be happy together, and I know that I will appreciate you."

"Sarah Sweetheart," read nother letter, "I love you and I know that you love me. I enjoyed the week-end, and I'm looking forwrd to seeing you again. I think you are a wonderful girl. I am fortunate in having you for my sweetheart."

"I was faithful to him," Miss Goldman declared emphatically. "There was never another man in my life. I still love him."

Miss Goldman plans to introduce scores of letters from Levin in the trial which began today. She will have witnesses to prove that Levin visited her at her parents' home on numerous occasions. She will produce persons who attended the engagement party.

Levin lives at No. 78 Ocean street, Providence.

TWO PUPILS DIE FROM DISEASE

Seven Others Are Stricken; Four Cases Also Reported in Saugus

Two pupils are dead and seven others are stricken with diphtheria, which has assumed a serious phase in South Weymouth. Four cases are reported in Saugus. Schools in both towns have been closed for fumigation.

Ruth Newcomb, No. 23 Curtis street, and Helen Loud, Pond street both of South Weymouth, and both pupils at the Nevins School in South Weymouth, died of diphtheria at the Brighton Contagious Hospital, a branch of the Homeopathic Hospital.

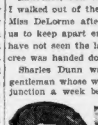
According to Parker T. Pierson, superintendent of schools in Weymouth, the Nevins School, closed for fumigation, will be reopened Monday. A careful watch will be kept on all pupils for a further outbreak of the disease. Rigid quarantine is being enforced at the homes of affected. Several cases of scarlet fever have also been reported in South Weymouth.

Four cases of diphtheria broke out among pupils of the second grade of the Toby School in Saugus. The room was closed for fumigation by order of the school board, and steps taken to have all pupils take the Schick test for diphtheria. Pupils showing a positive reaction to the test will be vaccinated for diphtheria.

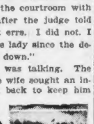
DEFENDS OTHER GIRL; ASSAILS HIS WIFE

Lawrence, Oct. 3.—"Whoever said I walked out of the courtroom with Miss DeLorme after the judge told us to keep apart erre. I did not. I have not seen the lady since the decree was handed down."

Sharles Dunn was talking. The gentleman whose wife sought an injunction a week back to keep him



Mrs. C. Dunn



Charles Dunn

from meeting Ouida DeLorme, piquant telephone operator. Today he revealed to a reporter for the Boston American that he had been a martyr long enough.

"I'll stand it no longer. It is all right to be a Don Quixote, but it doesn't pay nowadays. My wife was cruel to me. She kicked me out of bed, used a razor on me, she was cruel to me in the extreme. I am suing her for divorce shortly for these reasons.

"One morning as I started to get out of bed she hit me on the right temple.

"Another time when I attempted to chastise my stepson (my wife's son by her first marriage) she turned on me and beat me over the head with a poker. She blacked my eyes and bruised my head.

"The whole trouble started over my stepson, Richard Mitchell. He was a constant source of trouble in our home. He would get into difficulties and finally I tired of helping him. I tired of giving him money. I shut down on him. Then my wife started against me. Since then life at home has been terrible.

"There was never anything between Miss DeLorme and I. That was only a move on the part of my wife to blacken mo before she started action for non-support and eventually divorce. She knows as well as I that Miss DeLorme and I never had anything in common. It is all lies. Miss DeLorme was a friend of my wife's and a friend of mine. That is all. There was nothing more than that. My wife's charges are groundless."

Who Is President? 'Tex Rickard,' Is Quick Answer

Camden, N. J., Oct. 3.—"Who is the President of the United States?" asked Judge Shay of Eugene Blazzo, an applicant for American citizenship here.

"Tex Rickard," was the prompt reply.

When the laughter subsided the Court asked him who discovered America and he replied, "George Washington," forgetful of his illustrious compatriot. Blazzo was sent back to study.

7,000 BABIES TO BE GIVEN AN EXAMINATION

Seven thousand Boston babies will be examined by medical experts and their health and mentality charted under the plan of the American Medical Association.

They will be the entrants in the Better Babies Contest.

This was assured today by Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, Boston's health commissioner, and Dr. Eugene H. Kelly, State commissioner of public health.

CHANCE FOR MOTHERS.

They came to the rescue of Boston mothers when it looked, for a time, as though only 700 babies, the first who entered, would be examined. The announcement that only those early 700 infants are eligible for the Better Babies prize still holds good.

But the thing that interests most mothers, and the thing that is most important, is the health and mentality examination. This will not be lacking.

How they plan to examine the babies was explained today in a letter to the Editor of the Boston American, from Dr. Mahoney and Dr. Kelly. It follows:

"Because of the great interest aroused in the Better Babies Contest to be held in connection with the Boston Health Show, October 6 to 13, with a view to avoiding disappointment by thousands of mothers whose babies cannot be afforded the advantage of medical examinations in the Health Show baby contest, the State and Boston Health Departments have decided to give an opportunity for all parents who have entered their babies to have a similar thorough examination made.

"This will be carried out by establishing special baby examination conferences by the Boston Health Department for children living in Boston, and similar conferences by the State Department of Health for children residing in communities of Greater Boston, outside the city proper.

"Assuring you of our appreciation of your interest in developing this important event.

This means just what it says.

Boston mothers are not going to be disappointed.

The decision to examine only 700 babies at the Health Show came after physicians found it would require fifteen minutes to examine each infant.

After the show, notifications will be sent to every mother who has listed her baby on the Boston American coupons or by letter for examination. They will be told where and when to take their babies for examination.

More about this later.

PAYS BACK $5 LOAN AFTER 30-YEAR HUNT

Washington, Oct. 3.—Thirty-five years ago, when Michael Scanlon was a conductor on the D. L. & W., he loaned $5 to a waitress in the old Lewis House at Binghampton, N. Y. Today, Scanlon, now a night manager of the New Willard Hotel, received the $5 with an additional $5 interest. The woman had been trying for more than 30 years to learn his address, she said.

A NOVEL TUNED R. F. AND REFLEX SET

Tonight's Best Bets Among the Broadcasts

Here are some of the best things worth tuning in for tonight:

Local: Both WGI and WNAC have a good concert program tonight. The latter features Edward's Orchestra in classical and popular music, and WGI has a violinist, a soprano and a trio that ought to be good.

Distant: WBZ, in Springfield, has tonight the first lecture in a course in radio by the Division o fUniversity Extension. The other extreme is Charlie Chaplin, the film comedian, who will speak from WOR in Newark at about 9 o'clock.

For music there is the musical score of the new Broadway hit, "Little Jesse James," to be broadcast from WJZ in New York."

Station WIP, Philadelphia, is back on the air tonight after a Summer silence.

JAPS PLEDGE U. S. LASTING GRATITUDE

Tokio, Oct. 3 (AP).—The American Japanese Society tonight gave a luncheon to Cyrus E. Woods, American Ambassador; Brigadier-General Frank R. McCoy and other members of the American relief organization here. Baron Kentar Kaneko presided.

Baron Ijuin, Foreign Minister, expressed the gratitude of the Japanese people for "the greatest act of philanthropy in the world's history."

Baron Kaneko said that even California, "a hotbed of anti-Japanesism," must realize the good when Japan's hour of need arrived. The Baron said the assistance given to Japan after the earthquake had wiped out all misunderstandings between the two countries. The Japanese present adopted a resolution embodying that sentiment.

Replying, Ambassador Woods said optimism walls could not conquer the resolute spirit of Japan. He also paid a high tribute to the work done by members of the embassy staff and especially to the heroism of Ensign Thomas J. Ryan, Jr., a former officer on the staff, since promoted to lieutenant, who repeatedly entered the burning Grand Hotel and rescued many maimed persons who otherwise might have been incinerated.

DEFEAT OF BILL DUE TO CATHOLIC WOMEN

The defeat of the equal rights amendment to the Massachusetts Constitution last year was due to the work of the League of Catholic Women of Boston, according to a statement made by Mrs. F. E. Slattery before the convention of the National Council for Catholic Women, now being held in Washington.

Mrs. F. E. Slattery.

Mrs. Slattery, speaking before the Mrs. Slattery told of the work and activities of the Boston organization during the past year. Today she presided at a session devoted to a discussion of the question of immigration problems. Miss Alma Cotter of Boston was to be one of the principal speakers at this session.

Do Heavy Meals Begin to Tell?

Follow Your Meals With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They Give Stomach the Alkaline Effect That Prevents Gassiness and Sour Risings.

Those old-time husky eaters often fall down on a glass of milk or a doughnut, the stomach is heavy, fills with gas, is sour and woefully dyspeptic. Perhaps it had just such troubles always, but they didn't last. Now your stomach needs help and the best thing you can do is to fortify your meals with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They give the stomach the alkaline effect, they help it to digest food, they are a material to do this with, they absorb the gas, stop acidity, relieve pressure and no matter whether it is pork and cabbage, pie and cheese, sausages and buckwheats or steak and onions, your stomach works without distress and you have none of those troubles due to indigestion or dyspepsia. Get a 25-cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store. Then eat and be merry.

NOVEL 3-TUBE TUNED RF AND REFLEX SET

One of the most ingenious of the recent hook-ups to be described is shown in the accompanying diagram.

This set is equivalent to two stages of radio-frequency, two stages of audio-frequency amplification, and a crystal detector. This is accomplished by three tubes.

The antenna tuning is by means of a variometer, which is in series with a .00025 mfd. fixed condenser. A variometer having sixty turns on both rotor and stator will generally tune throughout the broadcast wavelength. The plate circuit is tuned by varying the connection of the fixed condenser would be an excellent adfitter, or if preferred, a small loading coil may be inserted.

The unusual feature of the first stage of radio-frequency amplification is that it is tuned by means of a split variometer, which roughly takes the place of a radio-frequency transformer. A split variometer is easily made from the ordinary article by breaking the connection between the rotor and stator, so that there is no direct electrical connection between the two. For this purpose, a variometer having sixty turns each on rotor and stator should be used.

The stator of this split variometer is tuned by means of a .23-plate condenser, and the rotor is tuned by a 17-plate condenser.

The second tube serves both as a radio and an audio-frequency amplifier, being reflexed with two circuits.

There are four controls to this set, but the practical tuning of it is not so difficult as might appear. Its selectivity is almost unequaled, and when properly constructed, the set should eliminate any QRM.

The principal tuning elements are the two variable condenser, and, to a lesser degree, the split variometer. If these are tuned to the station desired, the position of the primary variometer will vary only the moderately distant stations, and for real DX, only a rough setting is necessary.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Knows When You Darken Gray Hair With Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

"LISTEN, Marie," the Count said more gently. "If I have been brutal it was merely because there was no other way to fling you head first out of your fool's paradise. If I had not known to the very sense that forms the solid lower stratum of your mind, I should not have come here to say anything at all.

"You would [illegible] worth it. But remember Marie, that under this new science, the body may go back but never the mind. You your[illegible] your mind, your soul are no younger than your fifty-eight hard lived years. And what object is being young again for any of us if we are to [illegible] old mistakes? [illegible] that when you were a girl [illegible] now [illegible] tunity offered you as in the terrible period of European history. Nor could you have taken advantage of it if you had, for mere mental brilliancy and ambition cannot take the place of political experience and an intellect educated by the world. It may be that we shall both be disgusted, that our hearts will avoid nothing, and we shall all be swallowed up in chaos. But at least we shall have made what we could. And I know well enough to believe that such an implacable end would give you greater satisfaction than dabbling as the result of a handsome young husband.

He rubbed her back with one hair and continued his own. 'Would you like to make?' he asked.

"Yes!" She looked [illegible] with bitter eyes, but one had recovered her threatened composure. He regarded her with admiration, and they smoked in silence for several moments. Then he spoke again.

"You remember Elka, Countess? I suppose? She was seven years older than you and one of the dearest galantes of the day. She has taken the treatment and looks many years younger to-day, even when she was painted and [illegible] with a red wig. Elka is still forced to employ artifice, but she has lovers again, and that is all she did it for. Vienna is highly amused

"No doubt all women of her sort will take it for no other purpose. But many of the intellectual women of Europe are taking it, too—and with the sole purpose of reinvigorating their mental faculties and imparting the physical endurance necessary to their work. Happen to know of a woman scientist, Frau Bloch, who is now working sexteen hours a day, and she had had a bitter struggle with her enfeebled forces to work at all. Lorens is no more remarkable. He seems to be the only disciple he has yourself that [illegible] country has heard of, but I could name a hundred men, out of my own knowledge, who are once more working with all the vigor of youth—"

"Are she interrupted sarcastically. "And without a thought of women, of course."

"Probably not." He waved the hand needlessly. "But incidentally. That is where men have the supreme advantage of women. The woman is an incident in their lives, even when sincerely in love. And if these men indulge occasionally in the pleasures of youth, or even marry young wives, the world will not be interested. But with women, who remain the center and return to its follies, it will be quite another matter. If they are not made the butt of ribald jokes and lampoons they may count themselves fortunate. There will certainly be verbal lampoons in private.'

'Orthodoxy! Orthodoxy!'

'Psshaw. But orthodoxy is a fixed habit of mind. The average man and women hug their orthodoxies and spit their venom on those that outrage them. How it [illegible] years hence, when the [illegible] for [illegible] to be commonplace I do not pretend to say. But so it is to-day. [illegible] no doubt, you would be indifferent, for you have a contemptuously independent mind. But your career and your usefulness would be at an end.'

"And suppose I am quite indifferent to that?"

"Ah, but you are not. I will not say that I have killed Mary Ogden during this painful hour, for it is impossible to kill the dead, but I have exorcised her ghost. She will not come again. If you marry this young man it will be out of defiance, or possibly out of [illegible] taken considerably for [illegible] though he will be an object for sympathy later on.

"And you will marry him. Marie Zittany will [illegible] and it left in that clear brain of yours —from which the mists have been blown by the cold wind of truth. And in a year—if you can stand self-contempt and ineffable ennui so long—you will leave him, reassure your present name—the name by which Europe knows you —and return to us. But it may be too late. Vienna would still be laughing. The Viennese are a light hearted race, and a lax, but when they laugh they cease to take seriously the subject of that good natured amusement. It is not aesthetic. You know it is not aesthetic. And you [illegible] quite indifferent, Marie."

She shrugged and [illegible] "It must be time for luncheon," she said. "It will no doubt be horrible, but at least we can have it in here. The public dining room would be impossible. I will find Mr. Dinwiddie and ask him to order it."

When the men returned from their fishing trip at six o'clock they saw several of the women on the lake, but there was no one in the living room. Covering

SECRETS OF HEALTH

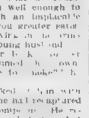
INSPECT YOUR FOOD SUPPLIES

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association

YOU, especially if you live in a city, get your food from many sources after it has passed through many hands.

Have you stopped to think of the possible significance of this fact?

Take butter, for instance. If it is made on a farm is it a clean farm? If it is made in a creamery, is it a clean creamery? Has it been properly packed and carefully transported? Has it been exposed to contamination by dust and germs of the air or by other dirt and other germs from human hands?



Dr. Reed

The same questions may be asked with the same point about practically every other food product that goes upon your table.

A few years ago the medical profession started and carried out a great reform movement about this particular product—butter, and, of course, milk.

Filthy stables for the cows, filthy food, filthy-handed milkers, filthy milk cans, filthy separators, filthy packing, were common stories.

And each story of this sort, in each city in which the scene was located, had its sequel in typhoid fever, scarlet fever, ptomaine poisoning and intestinal infections especially among children.

Let it be remembered that every article of food may be made a germ carrier and that the contamination may come either through the air or from handling.

How many of you have ever taken the pains to inspect the shops from which you get your food supplies?

You individually can do much to impress your food supplies that you are alive to the subject. You can also do much to attain sanitary inspection of groceries, bakeries, butcher shops and markets through your municipal health department.

But it is your personal attention that counts most.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made syrup. Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the throat tickle and heals the irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money will be refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

"IT is!" I cried delighted that Jim had understood and that he took enough interest to discuss the matter with me, and yet wishing he hadn't changed the subject so abruptly.

"Well—Anne, you don't like mystery and secrecy, do you mind explaining all this flurry of industry that keeps you from coming home until all hours and brings you down here so early mornings?"

"It's to pay back the sixty thousand dollars," I said, simply. "I gave myself until the first of next month to bring Pat my first instalment—five thousand dollars. And I couldn't scrape up more than thirty-five hundred. Then I heard of the chance to start the Merton feather people on their campaign. So I went after the contract. That's all."

"Think you'll get it?" demanded Jim.

"I ought to. I hope so. I like the preliminary work I've shown them."

Sat Considering

Jim sat considering it for a moment. Then he said terse[illegible]

"Suppose you do get the job—and I hope you do—won't it look bad to them if you demand cash on delivery? Doesn't a firm like that prefer to be trusted for at least thirty days?"

"Yes," I agreed. "But I told them I needed cash."

"Saturday's the 1st," remarked Jim. "You oughtn't to hound them to pay on the 2d like this. Suppose you let me advance you the money."

I was so astonished that I couldn't speak. I put my hand to my heart, and then it thumped under them. I could feel my eyes moisting. Jim leaned across the desk and patted my shoulder.

"Bless your heart, child, don't take it like that," he said in a voice which shook. "I know I have been able to pretend what I don't feel—namely, that your cause is a righteous one. I've no sympathy with Neal and no faith in him that can't changes. But I've got a lot of sympathy for your misplaced loyalty. No man likes to see his wife killing herself working. So let me write you a check for the missing fifteen hundred, and you take things a bit easier."

"I can't thank you enough, dear," I murmured. "It means a lot to have you think of me this way. But you don't believe in Neal. And even if you did I couldn't let you give me the money. I've got to pay back the money you all think my brother took. It's no good unless I myself pay for it."

Jim Astonished

"You won't take my check?" Jim questioned in astonishment.

"I can't—under the circumstances. But your offer makes me happy."

"You won't take it! Well, I'll be—say, Anne, don't you think you're pretty hitch-fabulin, throwing back my kindness in my face like this?"

Oh, Jim, I'm so grateful I [illegible] with it. But I can't let you pay off what you think is a theft," I protested.

Jim's lips twisted and thinned into a graying line. His eyes [illegible]. He got to his feet and leaned across the desk, pounding it to emphasize what he was saying.

WESTERN CRITICS ARE STRONG FOR EASTERN GRID METHODS

SECRET PRACTICE IS ABUSED AND PRAISED

By NICK FLATLEY

Criticism of eastern football, with its secret practices, and propaganda and the like, is thick and fast each early Fall, and perhaps never thicker nor faster than this present year.

But when it gets down to brass tacks, which give the indication of, you can't help admitting that there is method in this styled madness and not a bit of madness in the method.

The real value of organization and system is impressed on one by the more or less illustrious scribes from the far parts, who come looking over the teams in this section of the world.

Said individuals are always inclined to scoff when they give the up and down to any squad. The youths of the West, one learns, run bigger and brawnier than their Eastern brothers.

Haughton

They're supposed to be tougher and rougher and everything, but in the light of scores and games it doesn't seem to make it any the difference.

Bill Roper

Absence of the big Western scores, a stumbling block to elimination of coaching systems, system mean football superiority and indications are that within a year or two the Hauchton idea will be in vogue in all the athletic centers of the country.

so-called wild and woolly

WESTERNERS HAVE EDGE ON TEAMS OF THE EAST

In all other ways, the standings of wealthy Western institutions are far and away ahead of the East. They have, practically every one of them, facilities that make the best we boast appear feeble.

One unit of the Illinois "locker" building, with an indoor football field inclosed, seats scarcely less than the entire population of Princeton, 20,000 people. And the roof is so high that no punter has been able to hit it yet.

The teams turned out are naturally among the best, but they usually come to grief when they run up against a really representative Eastern outfit. Princeton and the Navy last Fall offered a splendid example. The Westerners built up a lead, and were apparently a far better team. But when the final whistle blew, the Tigers were on the long end.

Hughey Fullerton, who has a keen, eagle eye on an athletic forum of sport as the next one never will recover from that game. He's from the West, played with Chicago—fact, in the day, drew pay.

PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO COACHES AT HARVARD

"Princeton's opponents, had a wonderful team. They made just three mistakes in that game. And Princeton took advantage of each one, and scored.

Huch unfielded a lot of stuff while taking a look at the Harvard team. He wasn't impressed a bit by the size of the boys. He had been traveling around the land, and had a lot of the [illegible] ... Western boys are just beginning to realize it.

So much for that. It just goes to prove that the [illegible] ... ousness that emanates our big football propositions merely seems to be exaggerated because we're so close to it. It accomplishes things, and that's all that's necessary.

The grads and students who herald the fact that they can't see practice any more will be the loudest cheerers when victory perches on the banners, as they say, in the big contest.

The thrill of that is much greater than the kick they might get watching the daily monotonous drill. And down in their hearts they all know it.

Which reminds us that over across the Charles, they always quote Jim Lo[illegible] as being a master of the field and value of secrecy. Jimmy lives and breathes football, and probably knows as much about it as anybody. He has what looks like uncanny hunches.

Just before the Princeton game a few years ago, he came up with the notion that the Tigers were going to use a split formation made famous that Fall by Colgate. [illegible] ... as the New Jersey team had never disclosed any such play. But, on his say so, Harvard was drilled to meet that particular assault, and it's a matter of history that it was hurled at them, some three plays after the kickoff. It was a case of a surprise [illegible] ... homerama.

BOXING BANDITS BANISHED BY NEW BOARD IN BAY STATE

RING RATS FORCED OUT BY COMMISSION

By JACK CONWAY

Massachusetts boxing has taken its place in the sun alongside of baseball, football, hockey and track sports. The fistic game is experiencing the greatest era of prosperity in its history.

The tremendous interest in teh ring game was recently proved when three big shows were staged within a period of eight days and all of them was acessful in the matter of good bouts and large attendance.

A week ago last Friday night, Shevlin and Ward battled before a large gathering of fans at the Arena. On the following Monday night at Mechanics Building, Pancho Villa and Tony Thomas showed before a capacity house. Four days later at the Arena the boys were hanging on to the rafters when Hambone Kelly swapped blows with Pat McCarthy.

Legalized boxing and the way the ring game has been governed in Massachusetts are responsible for the great popularity enjoyed by the boxing game.

The Massachusetts Boxing Commission has shown the way to every commission in this country. This writer does not make this statement from hereasy evidence, but from actual observations in other States.

Commissioner Buckley, in particular, has been zealous, intelligent and determined in the administration of the ring game here. Chairman Foote has also devoted a great deal of his time to the boxing game despite his many duties as head of the Department of Public Safety.

We feel confident that Commissioner Lane, recently appointed to the Boxing Commission, will help to carry on the good work.

There have not been any star chamber sessions of the Massachusetts Commission. Any preliminary boy can get a hearing and he does not require the assistance of influential friends. His case will stand or fall upon its merits.

Of course, the Massachusetts Commission has been attacked. This is only natural. We never knew a gunman or a pickpocket who had a good word to say for our courts or law enforcement organizations. They detest those influences for good which make it necessary for them to follow the straight and narrow path.

You will hear unsuccessful boxing managers, third class boxers and hangers-on at boxing clubs from time to time attack the workings of the commission. If you were to examine into the records of these individuals, you would usually find they had been punished for trying to engage in or stage shady bouts and that they had been driven out of the ranks of respectable society.

COOLIDGE PUT BOXING UNDER PUBLIC CONTROL.

There would not be any boxing in Massachusetts today if it were not for legalized boxing. At the time President Coolidge, asGovernor of Massachusetts, signed the bill that legalized the ring game in the Bay State, the sport was in a mighty poor condition here. The sure thing boys had staged so many frame-ups that the authorities were about to step in and close the boxing game.

Came the commission. Naturally its every move was opposed by the crooks, gamblers and "in the bar" managers. The doings of the commission were ridiculed.

The sure thing element found it impossible to control decisions. No longer could they put their handpicked referee in the ring with instructions as to how to render a verdict.

The crooks haven't prospered under legalized boxing. They are unable to play any game fairly. So one by one they have fallen by the wayside and are no longer identified with the sport. There are still a few of the shady individuals left, but it will not be long before they, too, have passed out of the game.

FOUR BIG SHOWS AS RING GAME BOOMS.

Meanwhile the promoters are busy arranging more big shows.

Matchmaker Joe Goode has an all-star show billed for the Arena next Monday night. Battling McCreary, world's colored light-heavyweight champion, will oppose Glen Johnson of New York in the final number.

On Tuesday evening, the Armory A. A. has Archie Walker of New York billed to tackle Tony Julian of Brockton in the feature ten-session affair at a show to be held at the Grand Opera House.

The Faneuil A. C. will be back on the job on Thursday night with Harry Greb, world's middleweight champion, opposing Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia in a ten-session affair at Mechanics Building.

The Suffolk A. A. will step into the picture on Friday night at the Arena when it will stage a tussle between Johnny Wilson, former world's middleweight champion, and George Robinson of Cambridge.

Four big shows in one week. They will produce stirring matches, be well attended and be free from scandal.

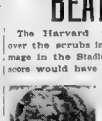
Giants Work Out

New York, Oct. 3.—The Giants worked out at the Yankee Stadium in preparation for the world's series games.

For more than two hours, John McGraw kept his squad in action. The players expect Artie Nehf to hurl the opening game with the Yanks. Scott or Watson will follow.

HARVARD GIVES SCRUBS A BAD BEATING

The Harvard varsity trampled over the scrubs in a furious scrimmage in the Stadium, 20 to 3. The score would have been much larger had not Coach Fisher taken the pigskin from the first and allowed the second to make a try for a couple of points.



Harold Bradford

The work of Merrill and Jenkins featured. Merrill scored two of the three touchdowns registered for the varsity. He made the first by a brilliant spurt around left end.

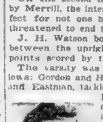
Jenkins' broken-field running was superb.

He broke through the scrub line on an off-tackle play, dodged through the whole backfield and went down the field for a thirty-yard run before he was tackled.

On the second touchdown, scored by Merrill, the interference was perfect for not one black-shirted man threatened to end the dash.

J. H. Watson booted the pigskin between the uprights for the only points scored by the seconds.

The varsity was made up as follows: Gordon and Hill, ends; Dunker and Eastman, tackles, Hubbard and Daniell, guards and Kernan center. Jenkins, Pfaffman and Nat Howe, the backfield, and Lee quarter.



Charley Buell

Crosby subbed for Gordon, Evans for Hill, Coombs for Crosby, and E Bradford for Evans at the wings. Hubbard substituted for Dunker and Hobson for Eastman at tackle; Littlefield subbed for Hubbard and Bradford for Daniell at guard; and Greenough subbed for Kernan at the ends.

In the backfield, McGlone piloted the team after Lee had his say. Mosley succeeded McGlone a few plays later Rogers supplanted Howe; Merrill, Jenkins; and Robb, Pfaffman.

Kicking showed a great improvement over previous days. Pfaffman and Mosley showed themselves capable of lifting the pigskin from forty-five to fifty-five yards consistently.

DILBOY POST SHOW ON THURSDAY NIGHT

The amateur tournament, to be staged by Dilboy Post V. F. W., tomorrow night will consist of five classes, at 112, 118, 126, 138 and 147 pounds.

Fred Russo

With such boys as Mat Cordes, Red Griffin, George Korbas, Young Minehan, Johnnie Moore, Frank MacDonald in competition, plenty of action is assured those fans who journey to Somerville Thursday.

As an additional attraction the new 50 piece band of DilBoy Post will be present and render a concert.

The bouts will start promptly at 8 o'clock, and arrangements have been made with the Boston Elevated officials to provide extra car service before and after the show.

ROBINSON OUT TO BEAT WILSON

George Robinson, Cambridge middleweight, is busy training for his ten-round bout with Johnny Wilson, former world's middleweight champion, which will be staged by the Suffolk A. A. at the Boston Arena a week from Friday night.

Robinson and Wilson have already battled three times. Each of their previous meetings have been jammed with thrills, which leads the fans to expect a torrid engagement in the contest on the evening of Columbus Day.

George Robinson

Robinson won a decision over Wilson before the latter won the title from Mike O'Dowd. As champion, Wilson first fought Robinson at Montreal. On that occasion Robinson scored three knockdowns and Wilson two. It was a sensational contest.

When Wilson later defended his title against Robinson at the Arena, the Cambridge man almost won the title in the first round when he knocked the champion part way through the ropes.

Robinson claimed he would have stopped Wilson on that occasion if he had not been hampered by the referee.

This last contest was attended by the largest crowd to ever see an indoor boxing show in Boston. The Suffolk Club's office at No. 399 Washington street reports that interest in the holiday bout indicates another record gathering.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

Think of it. During the last five months 234 industrial companies have improved their dividend payments and so have 24 transportation companies.

This means that stockholders of 260 companies are basking in the aggregate with enjoyment of hundreds, have received cash returns or future expectations most cheerful and thus had more money to spend or save.

Will these joints please take note of these facts?

What is the dividend outlook for the five three months of the year?

The announcement of quarterly payments of thousands of small holders will receive more generous checks. Most of these checks will come from some of the vast companies. The profits now being made by numerous railroads are enormous and enable their dividend disbursements to swell the directors' coffers, on a course wise.

The example set by the New York Central in increasing its payment from 5 per cent to 7 per cent., and the example of Baltimore & Ohio, in restoring payments on its common stock at 5 per cent a year are certain to influence other roads to do the same. Everywhere there is better than these stocks dis have been realized during recent years.

It is doubtful if the dividends of any previous five months have compare with what has been achieved during the five months which ended on August 31st.

Automobile and motor bus companies have lately been figuring in the list, and it would not be astonishing were other concerns in this category to enlarge the rewards put into the pockets of the long-suffering buyers of the industry has had an unusually prosperous year proving not a few companies a very welcome improvement. It may be however that a conservative policy was forced upon them by the uncertainties of the future. Possibly some of the companies will also be influenced by the fact that the cost of labor is going up.

Electric light and power companies have also been emerging from their doubt-clouded and timid cautious attitude of treatment of stockholders and will be possible in many cases during the coming year.

Of course, it must be remembered that money does not go as much as it used to go. Compared with its purchasing value, the dollar of today has a purchasing power equal to only two-thirds of the pre-war dollar.

Therefore the stockholders who received a return of 8 per cent. today is really no better off than the stockholder who received a return of 4 per cent. before the war.

* * *

It cannot be said that dividend rates, as a whole, have increased as much as wages have increased as much as wages have increased, or as much as the cost of living, or as much as the cost of capital is one of the things that have not risen or per cent.

These dividend showings, cheerful though they are, must be viewed in the light of what has just been said.

Incidentally, of late oil dividends [illegible]

Millionaires Safe From Dread Taxes in Florida

Some financial writers have been inclined of late to worry about the hardships with which it was imagined the man of great means was liable to be afflicted. The truth is apparently a Boston legal light, that most Eastern millionaires haven't been doing a bit of worrying about oppressive taxes.

Acting on "advice of counsel," they have been flocking to Florida for the brief stay that enables them to claim residence in that sunny State.

In Florida there are no State income or inheritance taxes.

Mrs. Tilda Selman, young Fitchburg divorcee, brought suit in Federal Court against John Sundholm, administrator of the $30 000 estate of Herman S. Rantamaki, late of Gardner, for $14 000, which she alleges Rantamaki agreed to give her when she became engaged to him.

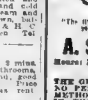
A Tale of Two Cities



Many years ago a terrible plague swept over England and took a toll of thousands. It was nothing, however, to the bubonic plague, discovered in 1894. Not so many years ago the terrible plague made its appearance in San Francisco. Through heroic efforts our authorities were able to control it without large loss of life. Every once in a while an epidemic of Mediterranean sapori is reported in Italy, France or Spain. With this knowledge ever before us it is the duty of wisdom to guard carefully all the contents possible and keep them away from the reach of people in their part, others don't. The best way to do this is to dust the entire house once or twice a week with Powders, one of the best preparations of Martin's Dog Powder and Powders, one for each pest of the household. "The Paradise of the Rich Is Made of the Hell of the Poor"

VICTOR HUGO

Not Entirely—And Not So Much So as It Used to Be

"Your duty requires you to make a public statement concerning the works of Victor Hugo," says a reader, and adds that modern life fears the truths that Hugo told. He wants to know why we don't write an editorial on Victor Hugo's phrase, "The paradise of the rich is made out of the hell of the poor."

By "the paradise of the rich" Victor Hugo meant the comfort, luxuries, freedom from care, known to the rich and unknown to the poor.

It is well to remember the wrongs inflicted upon the poor.

It is well also to think as accurately as possible, and to remember that comfort and happiness are based upon HUMAN INTELLIGENCE far more than upon helpless poverty. For instance:

In India you might see a rajah sleeping, and a miserable slave awake all night moving the "punkah," or fan, to keep the air moving.

There the misery of all-night labor inflicted on a poor man gives pleasant sleep to a rich man.

But in the American Pullman car, in July, the commercial traveler sleeps by night and eats by day—and an electric fan, representing human intelligence, keeps the air moving, and nobody suffers.

Intelligence using electricity, hitching it to a fan, takes the place of the poor slave toiling all night.

* * *

When the Queen of Sheba went to see Solomon, a camel probably carried her jolting on its back. And slaves ran beside her, keeping off the flies, tiring themselves out.

Later, in fashionable Paris, the rich man going to his dinner, was carried in a Sedan chair, with poorly paid human beings running and carrying the weight of his body.

There the comfort of the rich was based upon the discomfort of the poor.

But today the prosperous gentleman rolls along in a large limousine car, on the air which fills rubber tires.

A chauffeur, paid a hundred dollars or more per month, well clothed and well fed, turns a little wheel.

Human intelligence makes a machine weighing five thousand pounds ride on air, makes the explosion of a small quantity of gas in a cylinder move the carriage, allows wealth to continue enjoying itself, and frees poverty from suffering.

Incidentally, the little car that costs a trifle per day gives to the small man his share of the luxury of the rich—including a self-cranking device to keep him from breaking his arm.

* * *

The public parks open to all are finer than the private park of any man. Knowledge which once was in the possession of a few, carefully kept from the poor, is now open to all.

The great thought of all great men and all the truths of science are free to rich and poor alike in the public libraries.

The pity is that rich and poor show comparatively little interest as yet in this new supply of wealth that costs nothing.

* * *

It is a good thing to stimulate all human beings to earnest thought, just protest and wise dissatisfaction.

But it is not wise to tell any man, rich or poor, that his troubles are all based on the crimes of heartlessness of somebody else; that he is a virtuous being without faults, and would be absolutely happy if somebody would kindly get off his back.

* * *

To study the works of Victor Hugo should be part of any intelligent man's education.

Read his "Notre Dame de Paris" for a wonderful description of old, picturesque life in France

Read, of course, if you haven't read, "Les Miserables," which is in itself almost a complete literature. Read as a gruesome study of social conditions his "L'homme qui Rit" —the Man That Laughs

And for an early and most interesting view of Hugo's genius at its beginning read his "Hans of Iceland," written when he was only a boy.

The famous speech of the barricade represents Hugo's greatness. His sympathy for the suffering poor is perhaps best expressed in his poem that begins:

Dans vos fetes d'hiver, enfants heureux du monde
Quand le bal tournoyant de ses feux vous inonde

* * *

Pensez vous qu'il est lu, dans le givre et la neige
Le pauvre sous-traité d'une famille assiege

Hugo was a genius, but he was not by any means worthy our reader's description as "the greatest and most farseeing man of all men."

He would be better described as a powerful, earnest, courageous man, the best type of the French "bourgeois."

He enjoyed excitement and defied authority in youth, enjoyed adulation, and appreciated himself hugely in old age.

As regards literary genius, you could no more compare him with Villon of ancient France, or Moliere of the great French period, than you could compare the Queen of Sheba's camel with a modern flying machine.

One of Hugo's weaknesses and limitations appeared in such phrases as "the paradise of the rich is made out of the hell of the poor."

If he had been wiser he would have said: "Intelligence rules; in its lower forms it is cruel, in its higher forms it is generous. Earth will eventually be made a paradise for the human race, which will know neither rich nor poor, thanks to intelligence and its accomplishments."

* * *

It is not rendering any service to the poor to tell them that they are without fault and that all the trouble is with those that happen to have more money because they are less virtuous.

Prosperity is often based upon dishonesty, on cunning or trickery.

It is also very often based on superior intelligence.

Poverty is based sometimes on virtue, or unselfishness, self-sacrifice.

It is also, unfortunately, based sometimes on ignorance, indifference, lack of energy and dissipation.

ENGLAND'S OLDEST MAN 111

LONDON, Oct 3—Is there an older man in England than Nathan Lapatnick, of North Church street, Sheffield, who has reached the grand old age of 111?

Lapatnick is a Russian Jew, who went to Sheffield sixty years ago. He married his second wife at the age of fifty-six, and his young wife was merely eighty-five a few weeks ago. He rises every morning at 7 and retires at 9 p. m. His two meals a day are served at noon and 4 p. m., and his favorite dish is toast, soaked in cocoa. He sometimes enjoys a smoke, and a tot of whiskey now and then, to keep his strength up.

Vet's Family in Need

Editor Helping Hand:

I am an ex-service man, and I have been out of a job all Summer through sickness, and am unable to get work of any kind to do. My wife is expecting a baby anytime now and she is badly in need of baby clothes. I have two little boys, two and three years old, in need of heavy clothes for the Winter. My wife can make over clothes of any kind. I am in need of pants and a coat myself, and would be glad to take anything I can get.

J. H. MacS.

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a few dresses for a girl ten or eleven years old. I have five girls of my own, and know just how hard it is. May God bless you all. MRS. M. E. K.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of a mother who will be very grateful for these dresses.

Wants Boy's Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a widow with a boy seven, and have had a great deal of sickness. I wonder if anyone has any sheets or spreads, or boy's clothing, size ten, they could let me have. I owe my rent and am behind in other bills, so would appreciate such things. I have a single bed and spring if it would help anyone. All it needs is a little paint.

MRS. G. R. H.

Sweater and One Dollar

Editor Helping Hand:

Kindly send me the address of Mrs. L. J. K., as I have a new wool sweater that will fit her orphan brother, and enclosed please find one dollar for the good work. Keep it going.

K. B.

Many thanks indeed. You have been sent the address of Mrs. L. J. K., and the dollar has been added to the Helping Hand Fund.

Asks for Furniture

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a widow with four small boys. After a year of separation, I have at last succeeded in getting them back again together. My great drawback is in getting enough furniture to make my rooms look homey. I wonder if any of your readers might have something they do not need that would help. Anything would be greatly appreciated.

MRS. A. McK.

7 Children in Need

Editor Helping Hand:

I am twelve years old and the oldest of seven children. Would some kind reader send me some shoes, size 2, for girls, and also for my brothers and sisters, size 2, size 13, size 7, and girls, size 12, size 2½, and as the cold weather is coming, we have no underclothing, and if anyone has some sweaters, any sizes from 12 years down or anything in clothing, we would be thankful.

Railroad Consolidation

Editor Boston American:

The much discussed plans for consolidation of the New England railroads are interesting, but little progress is being made by either side.

The obviously logical plan is the consolidation into one transportation unit of lines from the Middle West to Boston, this unit to have no other seaboard outlet outside the New England States.

Every railroad now serving New England and every proposed consolidation has another principal port on the Atlantic. This gives them no incentive for renting competitive export freight by the port of Boston and Boston must furnish this incentive to the carriers to get its share of export traffic.

WILLIAM A. WALTER.

Cocoanuts Barred

Editor Boston American:

What, fruit trees along public thoroughfares? If we did have such trees along the public streets, the children would climb the trees for the fruit, thereby breaking the branches as well as endangering life and limb. If the fruit wasn't picked it would decay and cause a very disagreeable odor. Also, some of the fruit would fall on the sidewalks, thus endangering the lives of pedestrians.

Offers Winter Coat

Editor Helping Hand:

Enclosed find clipping. If these hats and slippers are not already given away, can I please have them. Please give me the address of H. A. R., whose brother wants some Alger books. I think I can send a few. I have also a Winter coat for her. Has any kind reader some disc records they no longer want. We love music and have had a phonograph passed on to us, but I cannot afford to buy records, they are so high. Will pay postage. I have some detective magazines if anyone wants them.

MRS. E. M. M.

You have been sent the addresses of M. D. V. and of H. A. T. Thank you for your offer of help for the latter.

Male Kittens to Give

Editor Helping Hand:

I have two pretty male kittens to give away. I would be pleased if anyone would send me their discarded piano music, any kind, as I live in a lonesome country place, and seldom get out.

MRS. C. M. R.

Your kind offer of kittens will be held for replies.

Thank you. You have been sent the address of Mrs. C. C., who is expecting a baby soon.

Needs Overcoat

Editor Helping Hand:

I have an overcoat for the Vet if he can call for it, as I am busy at present preserving. It is size 38 and in good condition, and if the Vet is supplied I will be glad to give it to someone else. Your column is a blessing. There are so many in need. MRS. M. S.

The Vet has been supplied pretty well, so you have been sent the address of Mrs. N. C., whose husband is badly in need of a coat, and she has been asked to call. Thank you.

THE LARGEST SITTING ARMY ON EARTH

By Herbert Kaufman

THE news is swamped with statistics. Propagandists, experts, social reformers and administration critics, as if by preconcerted signal, launch militant columns in a common attack upon civic indifference.

Statistics of tax receipts and the overheads of big and little governments (made to impress the necessity of reducing present lists of public servants), show how every wage-earner over ten years old contributes about $91 annually to the three and a half billion-dollar salary roll of 2,700,000 State, Federal and municipal employes.

Were our standing army equal to our sitting army the future would hold less worry.

Contrast with European management indicates that we are not getting very much for the money.

Premier Seipel, forced willy nilly to cut out official Austrian deadwood, has just demonstrated what may be accomplished when budget and income must be brought within bowing distance.

St. George and the Red-Tape Worm

Combined depredations of corn-borer, boll weevil and gipsy moth aren't comparable to the gluttony of the red-tape worm.

If congressional St. Georges, instead of devoting exclusive attention to corporation dragons, would occasionally deal a hefty blow at that monstrous revenue eater and compel the efficiencies of private business in public affairs, we'd have ample surpluses available for the proper care of destitute children, of whom Secretary Davis says there are a half million in the United States. Indigence furnished soil for 90 per cent. of crime.

Morality is crowded out of neighborhoods where entire families live in one or two rooms and the sidewalk is nursery for their offspring.

A part of above recklessly squandered millions were better diverted to playgrounds and a semi-paternalistic scheme for model dwellings.

Common sense points out that it will cost less to protect boys and girls from unsavory environment than to extend a more expensive prison system.

Death Loves an Illiterate

Marcus Dow, waving a statistical red flag at railroad crossings, street intersections and factory doors, tells delegates of the Safety Congress that seventy-five thousand persons were killed by avoidable accidents in 1922.

The issuance of five hundred thousand liquor prescriptions accounts for a considerable share of such deaths. John Barleycorn can't read "Stop, Look and Listen" signs. Nor may ten million illiterate native and alien laborers.

Van H. Manning, former director of the Bureau of Mines, found that two-thirds of the casualties among underground workers were traceable to their inability to decipher warning bulletins.

The gentlemen at the Capitol would perform a patriotic and humane duty by dieting the pork barrel and fattening the Bureau of Education's scrawny purse.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON BULLET AND TRAIN

By Garrett P. Serviss

"ART is long and time is fleeting." So wrote a poet. One might substitute the word "science" for "art," striking expression of truth, even though its meter would be lamed.

This reflection is induced by the following letter from Berkeley, Cal.:

"Would you kindly contribute another article on the subject of force and momentum, pertaining to a train traveling sixty miles per hour and a man standing at an engine end and shooting a gun whose bullet travel is at above rate, toward a man standing at a caboose end. I have endeavored for the past year or more to convince my hearers that the bullet will not leave the gun."

These are fundamental things, and one ought never to tire of trying to make them clear. In fact, this very question involves one of the first and easiest steps toward an understanding of the Einstein theory, for it is a case of relativity of motion.

The train is traveling 60 miles an hour, or 88 feet per second. The bullet lying in the gun bore, together with the gun and everything else connected with, or contained in, the train, is traveling in the same direction with the same speed, viz., 88 feet per second. All together they form a moving system. Now the bullet, before it is fired, has a momentum. In the direction of its common motion with the train equal to its velocity multiplied by its mass, or weight.

If the gun and the train could be wiped out of existence, leaving only the bullet moving, the bullet would strike an object in its way with the velocity of 88 feet per second, and the force of the blow would be measured by the momentum of the bullet moving at that speed.

Now the gun, polished from the front toward the rear of the train is fired, giving to the bullet an impulse backward, or against the motion of the train, just sufficient to counterbalance its forward momentum with the train in other words, the explosion of the powder produces a force directed backward which just destroys the forward motion of the bullet with the train.

The consequence is that the bullet no longer moves with the gun and the train. The effect of the explosion of the powder is the same as would be produced by some immovable obstacle instantly stopping the bullet, while allowing the gun and the whole train to continue moving forward.

So, as the train moves on the bullet passes out of the gun barrel, and, in effect, stands still with reference to the train (and also to the ground beneath), while the train leaves it behind at the rate of eighty-eight feet per second. When the man standing at the rear of the train is brought into contact with the arrested bullet it will meet him with a blow just equal to that which it would have struck in the opposite direction when it was sharing the train's motion.

For simplicity, without altering the result, we neglect the effect of atmospheric resistance, friction, etc. But a word of correction needs to be applied to the statement that the bullet stands still with regard to gravity. On the contrary it falls straight toward the ground. If the height of the gun muzzle was 16.1 feet, then the bullet would reach the ground in one second, and during that second the train would move away eighty-eight feet.

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS

WHERE IT IS A CRIME TO QUARREL

By Temple Manning

ONE of the things that surprises the visitor to an Eskimo village—especially if it is in Baffin Land—is the genial, jovial, joking air that pervades the whole place. Never a thought of unpleasantness is permitted to arise, and men and women, boys and girls, work and play together without even a thought of friction.

Those who know the various tribes of Eskimos declare they have gone to war but once in their history. Legend tells us that many centuries ago a few Norsemen from Iceland settled upon the southern shores of Greenland and were welcomed by the Eskimos. Later they quarreled with the Eskimos, blood was shed and the Eskimos fought with and killed all the Norsemen. Since then, it is said, they have been at peace with all the world.

No greater villain in Eskimoland is to be found than one who disturbs his neighbors by a fight or even his voice lifted in anger.

When Queen Mary Spied "That Naughty Powder Puff"

'Twas a Sultry Day and the Beauty's Nose Was Shiny ---But When She Sneaked One Wee Dab, Not Even Her Millions Saved Her from a Royal Snub

Mme. Adrien Thierry, Heiress of the Rothschild Millions and Innocent Cause of the "Powder Puff Explosion."

One of the Many Regal Dining-Rooms in Buckingham Palace.

LONDON.

LADIES who call at Buckingham Palace henceforth will leave their powder puffs at home. Or, if powder puffs are taken, their owners will conceal them carefully. For nobody—not even the proudest beauty of the British aristocracy—wants to risk an experience like that of Madame Adrien Thierry, lovely wife of the First Secretary of the French Embassy and daughter of the Parisian millionaire, Baron Henri de Rothschild.

Picture Madame Thierry, dark-eyed and beautiful, among the guests at a swagger reception in a drawing-room of the palace.

Picture her, as she chats with the Spanish Ambassador, or, perhaps, as she drifts idly about the room, suddenly becoming "nose-conscious."

Almost all women do, even at swagger receptions. Some infallible instinct seems to whisper, "Your nose is shiny!" And it always is.

Picture Madame Thierry automatically yet gracefully lifting her vanity case, opening it, remembering her powder puff, and dabbing the puff, daintily—once, twice, and again—on her patrician nose.

That is not a difficult scene to visualize, is it? But wait——

Picture Her Majesty, Queen Mary, seated on a small dais at one end of the drawing-room, receiving her guests. She bows, smiles, is very gracious. Suddenly Queen Mary gives a little start. Her eyes widen, her brows contract, her gaze is riveted on one spot.

With a quick gesture Queen Mary summons to her side Madame de Saint Hilaire, another member of the French diplomatic family at the Court of St. James. A low-pitched conversation ensues.

The Queen: "Who is the lady with the powder puff?"

Madame de Saint Hilaire: "She is Madame Thierry, your Majesty, the wife of the first secretary of our embassy."

The Queen: "You may tell her she is not invited to supper."

Madame de Saint Hilaire (nervously): "I think it advisable to remind your Majesty that Madame Thierry is the daughter of Baron Rothschild."

The Queen (grimly): "I thank you for your solicitude. Will you kindly convey my message?"

The sophisticated American to whom a powder puff, even in the hands of his wife or daughter, is an every-day sight, may find it difficult to imagine such a conversation in truth. To him the idea of queens "ordering people out" for such trivial matters as powder-puffs savors too much of "Through the Looking Glass," in which the Red Queen shouted "Off with her head!" at the slightest provocation.

Yet, according to the sub-rosa gossip of London society, this incident DID happen at one of Queen Mary's soirees exactly as it is reported here. And that is why newcomers to London, including many American debutantes, when they are lucky enough to receive invitations to any royal function, are warned by social veterans, "Leave your powder-puffs at home!"

To understand why her glimpse of "that naughty powder-puff," as the court wags referred, under their breath, to Madame Thierry's toy, should so arouse the displeasure of the Queen, one must know not only something of Queen Mary's own character, but of the peculiar heritage of convention that has prevailed at Buckingham Palace since the days of Victoria.

That monarch herself, though she ruled England well and was adored of her subjects, was noted as a blue-stocking. She set a flinty face against all fads and foibles that might be construed in any sense as indecorous or haughty.

Divorce was one of her pet abhorrences. To this day the British court observes her rule, that never shall it receive the guilty party in a divorce case. In Victoria's reign there were no exceptions—guilty or innocent.

After Victoria's death, her son, the late King Edward the Seventh, proved himself not such a stickler for form. "The first gentleman of Europe" was a gay blade in his youth. The present Prince of Wales, the most popular heir of royal blood in the world, is said to be much like his grandfather. Nor was King Edward's wife, Queen Alexandra, as strict as Victoria had been.

But when Princess Mary of Teck became Queen of England she brought to the throne a revival of the Victorian era. The rule against the inclusion of divorced persons among those present at court was resurrected with double force. Her own family did not escape the Queen's deep-rooted sense of good manners and good morals.

Princess Mary, her daughter, was reared by Puritan standards. As Queen Victoria had frowned on decollete dress, so Queen Mary did not permit Princess Mary to wear even the more conservative Parisian styles. Not until she married Lord Lascelles did the Princess have an opportunity to indulge the love fo. pretty fluffy-ruffles which nearly all girls have.

Then she went to Paris on her honeymoon. And there is a story whispered by certain ladies-in-waiting to the Queen, that when Princess Mary returned to London with many trunks packed with Parisian finery, and when she exhibited to her mother silky, black lingerie, the Queen quietly remarked:

"You are your own mistress now, my child. I suppose you may dress as you please and answer to no one but your husband. These—articles—you may wear. But not in my home! Please!"

And Princess Mary, run the whispers, dutifully observes her mother's request. Adorned with the "pretties" of Paris elsewhere, she is careful to wear the most decorous hats and gowns whenever she visits Buckingham Palace.

London also gossips carefully, but persistently, about the Queen's efforts to subdue the Prince of Wales into habits less frolicsome than the high-spirited Prince seems to have adopted for his own. His fondness for dancing at the Grafton Galleries and other semi-public cafes, together with his penchant for attending the giddy girl revues, often going five and six times in succession to the same hit—these and other debonair dissipations of the Prince, mild enough to most people, perhaps, but distressing to his mother, are said to have caused her many frowns and heartaches.

Thus, while society is agog over its latest tidbit, it cannot be said that the wise ones are exactly surprised at Queen Mary's action when she observed lovely Madame Adrien Thierry powdering her nose, though opinion is divided as to whether Queen Mary was within her rights as a hostess—royal hostess though she was!—when she withdrew a supper invitation to a guest simply because the guest powdered her nose in public.

Not that the society women of England are criticising their Queen—gracious, no!—but if murmurs of sympathy are any criterion of judgment, then Madame Thierry and her powder-puff are not without friends. As one titled lady put it:

"Poor thing! What was she to do—meet the Queen with a shiny nose? Really, a breach of royal etiquette is preferable to some miseries!"

As for Madame Thierry herself, she is discreetly silent. As a member of the French official family at the Court of St. James, she would not think for a moment of commenting publicly on the slight from Queen Mary. But circulating through Mayfair, from the lips of her friends, is an unofficial version of her views, which might be summed up as follows:

If the Queen can do no wrong, neither can a powder puff. The time has long since passed when cosmetics could be considered a symbol of frivolity. Nowadays no woman, least of all a Frenchwoman, would consider herself properly dressed unless her nose was powdered. If queens draw the line at powder puffs, then queens may expect small attendance at their functions. As for the supper Madame Thierry didn't get, she couldn't have eaten a bite anyway—with her nose shiny!

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

A New York burglar and his sweetheart accomplice got married the other day, and the cops caught them in the act of robbing a jewelry store fifteen minutes afterward. They're now spending their honeymoon in jail.

UNLIKE most newlyweds, they're getting along fine, but that's because they've each got a separate cell.

They never speak a cross word to each other; they have to do all their fighting by lawyer.

THE groom hasn't been troubled by his mother-in-law once; she can't get at him through the bars.

THIS newly married couple intended to go on a pleasure trip right after the wedding, but a couple of policemen came along and changed their itinerary.

SO for the time being they've given up the idea of traveling.

IT'S pretty nice when you can settle down immediately and have the city keep house for you.

IT takes a lot of worry off the bride's mind, she doesn't have to worry about ordering the meat or groceries.

THE jailer told her that the bride of a burglar couldn't expect to have a private bath and telephone in her room.

EVERY time she wants to call up her lawyer she has to use the phone in the lobby.

SHE says she doesn't like going to jail on her honeymoon, and after this she's not going to take any chances. The next time she wants to become a bride she's going to play safe and marry a policeman.

ONCE-OVERS

UNSELFISH FRIENDSHIP KNOWS THAT CRITICISM IS HELPFUL.

You have an erring friend, but rather than strain the friendship you refrain from your duty of speaking plainly to this friend about his or her shortcomings.

In other words you think more of your pleasure together than you do about the welfare, reputation and happiness of this person.

Do you call this real friendship?

No, it is merely selfishness on your part.

The right kind of friend would be more than ever your friend if by your admonition and charitable censure, he or she may change his or her ways and be saved from embarrassment or perhaps disgrace and unhappiness.

There may be a period of coldness between you after a tale of this kind, but you must expect that.

Usually when the guilty one gives a thought to the matter, realizes that you have acted in good faith, your words of advice ought to make that one a better friend and true.

Our enemies do not tell us to our faces what others are saying about us, unless done in anger to help stimulate and circulate evil effects.

An honest friend is a jewel, and you can tell that by the look in his eye be his words criticism or not.
